AMBASSADORS TO SETTLE SLOVAK AND POLISH LINE

Supreme Council Is Invited To Hear Both Parties

COAL QUESTION

French Premier Calls For Heavy Fuel Delivery

REPARATIONS UP

Economic Condition Of Germany Discussed In Document

(Reuter's Service)

Spa, July 13.—The Supreme Allied Council, meeting at Spa yesterday, decided to entrust to the Conference of Ambassadors the task of delimiting the frontier between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia in the Teschen and Spitz district. The Conference has been invited to hear the two parties and then to settle the question as soon as possible.

This resolution has been communicated to the Polish and Czecho-Slovak governments, which will have to conform loyally to the decision of the Allied Powers.

COAL QUESTION

Paris, July 13.—The Spa Conference will probably not conclude the question of the delivery of coa before Friday, although two out of the three questions raised have been settled, namely, the establishment of an Inter-Allied Commission and the control of the food supply for German miners.

The third question, which is now under discussion, is that of percentage. The French Premier is demanding on behalf of the Allies a monthly delivery of two million tons of coal.

The members of the Reparations Commission and the Allied and German delegates will today examine the German proposals, handed to the Conference on Sunday.

REPARATIONS

Spa, July 11.—The text of the German Reparations scheme has been published. The document, which is very long, begins by declaring that an arrangement must take into account the economic and financial capacity of Germany and that international economic sources of supply must be regained.

The scheme proposes that experts of both parties should meet as soon as possible to fix the instalments, in accordance with Germany's capacity.

In order to insure quick deliveries of the material demanded by the Allies, Germany is creating trade associations which will act in co-operation with the Government and be obliged to furnish specified quota of materials. The scheme recommends that each of the Allies should form organisations to control deliveries.

Regarding reconstitution of the devastated regions, Germany proposes that the work should be undertaken by means of a great international colonisation scheme, including the formation of an international syndicate of contractors, participation in which would be open to all States and which would clean up devastated areas, reconstruct industry, agriculture, railways, etc., and erect new homes.

INVITE CONTRACTS

The syndicate should be empowered to invite contractors and workmen of the Allied and Associated Powers and Germany to participate in this work, which would be carried out on business, not bureaucratic lines, without undue profits.

If the scheme is accepted in principle, a conference of representatives of the Governments and countries wishing to participate and representatives of the population of the devastated regions should be held immediately to consider the practical execution of the scheme.

Berlin, July 11.—The tone of M. Millerand's speech today at the Spa Conference on the subject of the delivery of coal has relaxed the tension in Berlin. It is noteworthy that the Conservative newspapers attribute the Allies' "change of tone" to Herr Hugo Stinnes' oration, which in

Brilliant Festival Is Closing Feature Here Of French Celebration

Sports Program, Addresses, Receptions And Finally, Marvelous Illumination Of Beautiful Grounds Are Features Of Bastille Anniversary

Glowing with multi-colored lanterns, thronged with gay crowds of nearly every nationality and enhanced by the strains of good music and the laughter of merrymakers, the grounds of the French Club and the Koukaza Gardens presented an unusual spectacle last night, a fitting climax to a wonderful celebration of the anniversary of the Independence of France.

Foreigners and Chinese alike united in making the French celebration a memorable event. The crowds were multitudinous and the lights myriad. Everyone was gay from early morning until late at night and the program for the celebration proceeded in a most gratifying manner.

There were receptions, salutes to the colors, patriotic addresses, cinema performances, dancing, a sports program that held an immense crowd's interest from beginning to end and illumination that could have been conceived only by the artistic French.

The expansive grounds of the Club and the Gardens were encircled by multiple festoons of Chinese lanterns of every hue and shade—but always arranged with artistic design. The ponds were beautified with low-hung lights of pale green that enhanced their landscape value. Two firey dragons swam menacingly in the great pond but failed to frighten the throngs of youngsters and oldsters who were far from sedate in their expressions of delight over the effect that was obtained.

Tables were set out on the lawn of the Club and dancing on the tennis courts was a popular diversion.

In the meantime the crowds in the gardens who did not choose the cinemas were entertained by a band concert.

SALUTE TO FLAG

With weather conditions ideal in the early morning the salute to the flag at the French consulate-general was most impressive. A detachment from the French Cruiser Desaix, under the command of Captain Garry, took part in the ceremony which was also participated in by the French and Annamite police and the Siccawi band.

The consul-general made a brief address in which he dwelt on the incidents of the war. At the conclusion of his address the assembled men in uniform marched past the colors to the stirring strains of "La Marseillaise."

At 10 o'clock in the morning came the distribution of the year's honors for the fire brigade. The men, represented by Messrs. Carnovara, Numa and Feuten took first, second and third honors. The first showed an average attendance of 36 men and the others 34 each for 42 fires to which they were called during the year.

TOAST TO PRESIDENT

At 11 o'clock a reception was held at the consulate general. The consul-general in proposing the health of the president, said:

"The day of our national fete brings to us serious thoughts: not yet can our minds detach themselves from thoughts of the dreadful crisis into which our country was plunged and from which she was saved only by the supreme sacrifice of a million and a half of her sons. The devotion and the virtue of these dead liberators of the country give to us today, whatever may be the difficulties of the present hour, a serene confidence in the future. France, in the modesty of her victory, wishes to insist upon nothing beyond what is strictly indispensable to her existence: to be assured that the guarantees necessary for the life of the country will be given to her. History will render full justice to those grand patriots who, with a profound sense of the German psychology, were not content with the apparent submission which was offered immediately after the Armistice by the beaten Germans, but who with determination insisted upon all guarantees being made effective during the long years to follow, without any possibility of German escape from them. 'While this diabolic spirit remains in Germany and shows no sign of disappearing, it is our duty to the rising generation to make certain that our precautions are never in any way relaxed.'

These are the words of Marshal Foch who thus reminds us of the frightful war which would be recommenced if we ceased to be vigilant. Thus protected against the peril of any future aggression France will be able to restart the work of reconstruction of her economic forces which are now returning to normal. Is it not encouraging to record that the deficit in the commercial balance for 1919 has been just equal to the production of the works throughout the North and East which were destroyed and is it not proof that France will find again her past prosperity and wealth when these works and factories have once more been brought to a state of the most modern perfection?

FUTURE IS BRIGHT

"The other parts of our magnificent colonial empire, of which the war has helped to show us the wealth, will now permit us to find on French territory and under

GREAT BRITAIN NOT SUFFERING FINANCIALLY

Excess Profits Tax To Be Continued; Reduced Next Year

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—In the House of Commons today, replying to a motion introduced by Mr. George Terrell in favor of a reduction of the excess profits duty from 60 to 40 percent Mr. Austen Chamberlain pointed out that Great Britain had not suffered from the financial troubles experienced by the United States and Japan.

He gladly noted the check in the spirit of uncontrolled expansion and speculation which had been prevalent earlier in the year.

He was anxious, he said, to find an alternative for the excess profits tax, pending which he could not abandon the tax. The tax was only temporary.

He agreed that trade required certainty regarding the future. The Government had never contemplated that the 60 percent levy should continue beyond the current year, and it would not exceed 40 percent next year.

Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that it was the Government's duty to endeavor to restore credit before the lean years set in. Nothing, he declared, had more impressed the world or produced a quicker return than "our efforts to right our finances immediately the war stopped."

Mr. Terrell's motion was rejected by 289 votes to 117.

RUSSIAN SOVIET ACCEPTS TERMS FOR TRADING

Bonar Law Tells House Of Commons Of Agreement Made

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Mr. George Thorne (Radical), Mr. Bonar Law confirmed the report that the Russian Soviet Government had accepted the British Government's conditions with regard to the resumption of trade.

An understanding had therefore been reached with regard to the principles upon which a trade agreement could be negotiated.

Mr. Bonar Law also stated that the British Government, in agreement with the Allies, had made proposals to the Soviet Government for an immediate Russo-Polish armistice on equitable terms, to be followed by a peace conference between Russia and the border states.

Replying to further questions, Mr. Bonar Law declined to say whether the British Government had threatened to send military forces in the event of the Russian Government's non-compliance. He denied that his statement involved British recognition of the Soviet Government.

Bomb Explodes In Garden Of Home Of Wang Yi-tang

A second bomb attack on General Wang Yi-tang, Northern peace delegate, was made early Wednesday morning at his Shanghai residence in Hardoon Gardens, at Hardoon and Bubbling Well Roads.

As was the case in the first instance, about a year ago, the object of the dynamiter appeared to be terrorism rather than destruction.

The two instances were similar in their nature. In both cases the bombs were thrown over walls into gardens where there was little chance of actual damage being done.

Police officials are making an investigation of the latest outrage, but thus far no arrests have been made.

MAN BLAMED FOR GIRL'S SUICIDE FREED BY COURT

Magistrates Hold That No Case Is Made Against Accused In Tragic Case

That the object of the affections of a love-sick girl who ends her life rather than wed another cannot be held on a criminal charge, was the ruling made by the Mixed Court yesterday. British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Yui dismissed the case against Nyi Ah-sz who was blamed by the fiance of Tsang-kwe for her death by opium poisoning.

The accused man is married and, it was said in court, that his wife's jealousy was one of the contributing causes to the girl's tragic end. But Nyi stoutly maintained that his relations with the Tsang were proper at all times and that she and his wife were the best of friends.

It was the contention of the defense that Tsang ended her life rather than marry a man to whom she had been bethrothed for a money consideration of $200 by her parents. She was said to have had a particular aversion to her prospective father-in-law.

Holding that nothing had been shown to indicate apything of an immoral character between Tsang and the accused man and that no case had been made as to his being a cause of her act, the court dismissed the defendant.

Vladivostok, July 13.—The British Commissioner, Mr. R. M. Hodgson, left for Chita today. He is expected to return in the first week in August.

The Japanese civilian population is preparing to evacuate Taraikal. The Japanese authorities are giving them every assistance. Two thousand railway cars have been asked for.

Several Japanese regiments have arrived in Vladivostok. They were reviewed today by General Oi.

A Chinese General has visited the Russian authorities at Nikolsk to thank them for the assistance, given to Chinese soldiers, during their stay. The Chinese troops are now leaving and the General expressed the hope that the Russian authorities would protect Chinese citizens.

General Bochkaroff arrived here today. He was marched through the city under a strong guard to the prison.

Afghanistan Split Over Bolshevism

(Reuter's Service)

Calcutta, July 12.—The frontier correspondent of the Englishman, describing the position in Afghanistan, says that there are two parties in Afghanistan, one in favor of giving the Bolsheviks free passage through to India and of joining in a Bolshevik attack.

The other party which is mainly agriculturist, is determined to fight the Bolsheviks at the moment they cross the frontier.

The Ameer is vacillating and it is reported that he may abdicate at any moment and surrender either to the Bolsheviks or the British.

Printer Suspected As Counterfeiter Is Put Under Bond

One Thousand Dollars Shop Security For Five Years Is Demanded

A Chinese printer who was found with a large number of counterfeit banknotes in his possession was called before British Assessor Hutchinson and Magistrate Tsang yesterday for hearing. The case against him was dismissed for lack of evidence but the court ordered that the man furnish shop security for $1,000 good for five years.

The defendant declared he got the bogus money from a Japanese who was to pay him $15 for taking it to a Chinese named Tsang at 699 Fokien Road. He said Tsang was to have paid the Japanese, whom he could not identify, $60 for delivery of the notes and that his fee was to come out of that sum.

Detective Inspector Cruikshank reported having searched the printer's premises and that there he discovered paper similar to that on which the notes were printed. The court felt, however, that the evidence was not strong enough to warrant a conviction.

Labor Party Holds Chicago Convention

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, July 11.—In spite of the fact that the delegates, summoned to Chicago by the "Committee of 48," as representatives of the single-tax movement, have failed to reach an agreement with the leaders of the National Labor Party for the nomination of a Presidential candidate to represent a fusion third party with a program, satisfactory to both elements, the National Labor Party Convention will open here tomorrow.

Tuan, Anti-Japanese, Says Doctor Sun, Who Sees No End In Present Conflict

Southern Statesman Says Tokio Controls Entire Situation With Chang Tso-lin As Pivot —Noteworthy Message Published

All of the complex political developments of recent weeks in China—the coup in Hunan, the clash of warring forces at Peking, the late disturbances in this province—the whole ruction and conflict of Anfu and Chihli factions, may be traced to maneuverings of Japan and are an outgrowth of moves that were made here in Shanghai by Southern leaders following the smash of the government at Canton.

This is what Dr. Sun Yat-sen says and this southern statesman, who has lived in retirement here in Shanghai for the past year, agrees with a view recently advanced by a compatriot, Mr. Tang Shao-yi, that no conclusion in this far-flung controversy has yet been reached, that no peace is in sight, and that open warfare is an imminent probability. But he goes further. He says that the ultimate decision will be made by Tokio, that whoever wins, it will be a Japanese victory, and he admits that all of this has thrust far into the future hope of any negotiations for settlement of the larger question of the war between North and South.

TUAN ANTI-JAPANESE

In many quarters, probably, an assertion that Doctor Sun made will be received with incredulity. He had been discussing with the interviewer the career and the devious activities of Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, head and front of the Anfuite power in the present conflict.

"And, at heart," said Doctor Sun, "He is anti-Japanese."

He had been talking of events leading up to the present clash with its attendant disruption of commerce, with armed forces paralyzing traffic lines as they moved in battle array from place to place.

"What has happened may be traced to the manifesto that was issued here," he declared. Doctor Sun referred to the announcement of the secession of a group of southern provinces, the outstanding feature of a proclamation made by him and the other southern administrative leaders after they had gathered here when the Canton Government broke up.

"This manifesto," Doctor Sun explained, "specifically called for publication of all secret treaties that have been entered into with Japan, and it called also for abrogation of the military agreement between Japan and China." He emphasised these points.

"Marshal Tuan," he went on, "accepted this proclamation which was drawn with the aim of bringing about resumption of peace negotiations between North and South here in Shanghai and ultimately with the purpose of reuniting the country with a single parliament that was to proceed in all ways to work to develop a strong China—an independent country."

TUAN'S PLIGHT

"It was when it became common knowledge that Marshal Tuan had taken this course—contrary to all Japanese plots and hopes—that troubles gathered swiftly about the Peking leader."

In discussing Tuan's course Doctor Sun went far back into events of recent years in China tracing the whole movement that led to the split between North and South and subsequent happenings in the South, as well as the part that China played in the European war.

"If I had not divided the country into two hostile camps at that time," he asserted, "China today would be a Japanese province—what has happened to Korea would be China's lot.

"Japan today controls—owns North China," he went on. "Had the division not occurred Japan would have held all of China with garrisons of Japanese in command of every port and with every traffic line in Japanese hands.

"And so," he resumed, returning to what Tuan has done," this leader has been enmeshed in the intrigue of the Japanese. He has had to be pro-Japanese or be destroyed.

"When Tuan accepted the manifesto that was issued here in Shanghai it marked his first affront to the purposes of the Japanese. He promised that Japanese influence would be removed, in doing this, and I felt he was sincere.

MAY RECANT

"He may withdraw all he has pledged. He may fear to court the destruction that, of course, may overtake him, and if he does renounce his pledges he again will hold to his high place and remain a great figure in the government. He may be destroyed, in any case, for what he already has done, for whether the Japanese power will elect to have Anfu or Chihli faction win in this controversy today is a thing we may not be sure of.

"Chang Tso-lin in the North may be the deciding factor. If Tuan should remain true to his pledges—if he means to cast off the Japanese yoke, he has not only to overcome those opponents that now face him—he must overcome all the vast forces under the control of Tokio, and that means also Chang Tso-lin.

"He may be able to do it. Eliminate Chang Tso-lin and Tuan could destroy Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu—in sixty days. But Chang Tso-lin is the powerful factor, as a Japanese friend, a Cabinet minister said to me—he is the barometer of Japanese policy in China.

"So it has happened that after Tuan accepted the manifesto, Wu Pei-fu started all that has happened. The forces gathered against Peking, against Tuan—to destroy him.

"Then Chang Tso-lin went to Peking carrying the threats that he voiced." Doctor Sun paused. "And then," he added, "I addressed a communication to head of the War Ministry at Tokio—to the head of the ministry, Tanaka.

"The message," Doctor Sun said, "was dispatched June 29 and since I have seen its effect. Chang Tso-lin was recalled from Peking—not by the Japanese Minister at Tokio. The message calling him back to Mukden was sent by the Japanese Consul there—and Chang went back. What has happened there, one cannot say. Chang may have won the Japanese over to his way of thinking and this may explain his later strong messages to President Hsu.

"The message that I sent to Tanaka is not secret. It may be

MANDATE IS ISSUED FOR CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES

Present Anfu Tactics To Get Tuan Appointed Dictator

EFFECT DOUBTFUL

Anticipated Wu Pei-fu Will Refuse To Obey; Chang Holds Key

SIX PEACE TERMS

Attack On Foreigners Is Feared; To Bring In Outside Assistance

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Peking, July 14.—A Presidential mandate has been sealed ordering the cessation of hostilities on all sides. The effect of the order, however, is doubtful, especially as General Wu Pei-fu is ordered to return to his post as commander of the Third Division.

It is reported that the brigade of Little Hsu at Loyang, Honan, has been surrounded and disarmed by General Wu.

It is also reported that Marshal Tuan now demands that the Peking Chamber of Commerce hand over $3,000,000 and has forced the Bank of Communications to give him $5,000,000 in notes.

Much now depends on the future movements of Chang Tso-lin of Fengtien, which will have the decisive influence.

PRICES GOING UP

The prices of foodstuffs are rising. The menace of shortage is increasing.

Chang has ordered large number of railway cars and he is believed to be preparing the despatch of troops to the Capital.

Scores of self-styled mediators are now rushing round Peking, seeking a compromise.

The present Anfu tactics will force the President to issue a mandate, appointing Marshal Tuan commander-in-chief of all the forces in the country and then order Wu Pei-fu to be reinstated. The Anfuites assume that Wu will refuse to obey, whereon Marshal Tuan will have the pseudo-legal ground to declare war on Wu.

However, signs of the demoralisation of Tuan's troops are increasing.

First hand reports from Liuliho describe the utter failure of Tuan's troops to make a stand against the seasoned troops of Wu. They were terrorised, outmaneuvered and ambushed, fleeing at the first shot fired by their opponents.

Repulsed by the Chihli militarists in the initial combat, the Anfuites are now seeking a compromise. Six peace terms will be offered by the Anfu Club, according to decisions reached by its members on Tuesday. They are the organisation of a Cabinet by Chin Yung-peng, the dismissal or resignation of the three extreme Anfu ministers, the retention of the services of Marshal Tuan, the appointment of General Tsao Kun as Inspector-General of four Provinces, the maintenance of the new Parliament and the re-instatement of General Wu Pei-fu.

YANGTSZE TUCHUNS ACT

These terms, of course, are not acceptable to the Chihli men, who are now re-inforced by the three Yangtsze Tuchuns. In a circular telegram signed by Tsao, Chang Tso-lin, Wang Chuan-yuan, Li Shun, Chen Kwang-yuan and Chao Ti, they pledged themselves to fight Tuan and his Anfu lieutenants for their treason.

The message branded the action Tuan has taken as detrimental to the foundation of the Republic and refuses to recognise the Mandate relieving Tsao and Wu Pei-fu from office, because, they say, the President had been disabled by the force of the Anfu Marshal. Their attitude is firm and while they did not propose to take the offensive they ignored the attempts of the self-styled mediators.

REPLY OF ITALIANS

Following the protest of Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu with the Diplomatic Corps against the action of the Italian and Japanese Legations in assisting the Tuan army, the Italian Minister has issued a statement to the effect that Italy did not sign the convention together with the other powers to refrain from supplying arms and munitions to China, so she is not obliged to conform to the stipulations of the convention. The note further added that the recent shipment was part of a lot contracted for by Peking some time ago. It denies that field guns, aeroplanes and air explosives were being delivered.

From a Japanese source, it is said that the Japanese Minister has informed the Peking Administration that the 200-odd Japanese officers employed by the Border Defense Army have been recalled in compliance with the decision of the Diplomatic Corps.

Knowing their days are numbered, the Anfuites are scraping up whatever money they can obtain from the Japanese. Tseng Yu-tsing is busier than ever in his negotiations with the Okura gang, pledging and selling all the resources that are available. Tseng has hoisted up the American national colors in front of his home.

NO MILITARY CHARGE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 13.—There has been no change in the situation from the military point of view.

A party of mediators, including Generals Lo Kai-peng, Vice-Minister of War, Ma Lung-piao, Chang Hsai-chih, Chief of the General Staff, and also General Yuan Nai-kuan left Peking yesterday for Tientsin and after conferring with Tsao Jui, the Civil Governor, proceeded by motor-car to Paotingfu.

They stated that they were commissioned to offer General Tsao Kun and General Wu Pei-fu promotion, if they would consent to abandon hostilities, the Tuchunship of Hunan being offered to General Wu Pei-fu.

AVIATORS FLEE

Twenty-four aviation students, who were in training as pilots, fled from Nanyuan last night as they did not desire to be enrolled for military service.

A soldier, belonging to the Tuan-Hsi forces arrived in Peking last night and reported that General Wu Pei-fu's troops had on Saturday night ambushed and mowed down with machine-guns outposts of the Frontier Force, when they were taking up their posts. The soldier expressed the greatest fear of General Wu Pei-fu's veterans.

General Chang Kwei-ti's troops are occupying temples near the Western Gates of the city with instructions to halt and disarm all armed men, fleeing to Peking.

It is reported that hundreds of railway cars have been despatched to Mukden.

PRESIDENT ASLEEP

The Cabinet yesterday drafted a mandate, which was forwarded to the President at nine o'clock in the evening for his seal. Presidential officials replied to the Cabinet that the President had retired and could not be disturbed.

The Anfuites state that this mandate, which orders the cessation of hostilities, will be issued this evening. They also assert that the mandate contains the appointment of Marshal Tuan Chi-jui as Military Dictator.

A mandate, issued yesterday evening, emphasised that the protection of the lives and property of foreigners in China was specially provided for in treaties and that this obligation must be faithfully observed. The mandate instructed all military and civil officials in the capital and in the provinces to pay special attention to this matter and warned them of the consequences of neglect.

ANFUITE DANGER

It is noteworthy that anti-Anfu official circles declare that there is danger of the Anfuites creating an incident, such as an attack on foreigners, as an excuse to bring in foreign assistance. The Government is, therefore, keenly alive to the necessity of not allowing the creation of conditions, whereby the presence of foreign troops might be deemed necessary.

While there is nothing to indicate that the Anfuites have yet reached the desperate situation, which would justify such an extremely dangerous expedient, this revelation of official opinion is indicative of the failing prestige of the Anfu Club at the capital.

CHIHLI PARTY HOPEFUL

Anfu hopes obviously center in the expected mandate and Japanese support, which, the Japanese Legation asserts, is not being given, while the Chihli Party continues optimistic of the ultimate outcome, expressing the firm conviction that they are supported by the vast majority of popular opinion, both in the North and in the South.

Whether General Tsao Kun and General Wu Pei-fu will pay the slightest heed to the mandate prohibiting hostilities is very doubtful, as previous mandates have already denuded them of their official positions.

IGNORED DISMISSAL

In this respect their official status is similar to that of General Hsu Shu-tseng, who has completely ignored his dismissal, contending that the President alone is incompetent to dismiss high officials without the endorsement of the Cabinet.

The President's decision whether to issue or to decline to issue this mandate will probably bring the local situation to a head. If the mandate is issued, Marshal Tuan Chi-jui will endeavor to consolidate the position, to which he has succeeded in obtaining official complexion.

On the other hand, if the mandate is not issued the Anfuites will be forced to put the issue to test by the sword or acknowledge their defeat. In either case, however, the settlement must rest largely upon the attitude of General Wu Pei-fu.

WAR ORDER ISSUED

Peking, July 14.—A mandate was issued this morning, ordering the cessation of hostilities and instructing commanders to withdraw their troops to their original stations.

BAD DEFEAT

Chengtu, July 3.—The Kwei-chow troops have been severely defeated by the Second Szechuen Division, and the latter have re-occupied Pishan and Howchow.

The Fourth Szechuen Division has evacuated Tzelutsing without fighting, in favor of the Yunnanese.

The Third Szechuen Division is refusing to fight the Fifth Yunnanese Division.

Paoning has been occupied by bandits on the side of the Tuchun.

TWO CHINESE PAY PENALTY FOR MURDERS

One Is Sent To Arsenal And Other Escapes With Four Years Term

Two Chinese were sentenced by the Mixed Court yesterday on charges of murder. One was sent to the Arsenal and the other escaped with a four years term of imprisonment.

The man slew his victim while in a rage because she had accused him of the theft of clothing from her apartment at 1505 Avenue Road, where the murderer also had quarters.

The children will recover from their wounds, the doctors believe, the court was informed yesterday by the police.

Leyland Hodgson Co.

BY DOMINO

I have every sympathy with members of theatrical companies traveling through the Orient. They get paid only when they are working, and that means the jumps between, say Singapore and Hongkong, or Hongkong and Shanghai, are lost time to them. When they get to port they like good houses, and they like above all things to please those good houses, and so for many years past I have always said all the nice things that it has been truthfully possible to say. And all this only leads up to just a word or two upon the performance given by the Leyland Hodgson Company last night at the Lyceum Theater.

The piece under notice was called "The Spa Girl." There is next to nothing to the show. The musical numbers have very little tune and no pep. The chorus, which means so much to a revue, were all at sixes and sevens, and showed unmistakably that they needed any amount more rehearsal.

Shanghai playgoers are very generous, but at the same time they ask for something good, and they like even poor stuff to be served up daintily. But when the stuff is not good, and it is put over in any old style, then they kick. Leyland Hodgson had a most flattering house when he gave his opening show on Monday. The reason is that the local playgoer remembered that when he came out with the Bandman Company he proved himself to be a thoroughly good actor. He pleased with voice, manner and acting. We expected, that knowing Shanghai, he would give us something as good as himself. He has however brought along with him revues that have neither been heard of in London, or which have not made big hits.

Probably Mr. Hodgson has a number of engagements ahead of him, and as we can only wish him the best of luck, it is an excuse to give him a little advice. Polish up the dialogue. Get any amount of new chorus business. Add a vocalist or two to the company. Put some peppery dances into the revues. Then punch, and every playgoer will help to pull you well over the footlights.

Last night Miss Helen Suttie sang sweetly and acted well. Percy Baverstock worked hard. Jack Gordon tried his hardest to get something out of his poor lines and at times was funny. Cyril Dane had a song to sing about the 'Good Ship Love' and it proved one of the most acceptable numbers in the show. Leyland Hodgson seemed to be weighted down with either responsibilities or with a feeling that he did not have the goods. Miss Florence Harrington put any amount of character into her work and added to the good opinion she won on her first appearance here.

Tonight the same piece will be repeated. Tomorrow and Friday the show will be vaudeville.

Brilliant Festival Is Closing Feature Here Of French Celebration

favorable conditions the raw materials which we are in need of. Before a future full of the wonderful promises, in spite of the difficulties inseparable from the period of actual transition, let us make a rule to banish all useless inquietude and retain all confidence in the wonderful faculties of recuperation which our race has so often proved.

"Be proud of those qualities which have been demonstrated and which have carried us to the summit of the prestige which we enjoy and which, more brilliant than ever, we must pursue to restore our spiritual power. Here, each of us, in the sphere to which he has been called, be it commercial, missionary, employee, or official, must do his work remembering always that he is a worker for the destiny of distant France and, therefore, must work as a good servant. That is the idea which we must constantly retain, the patriotic flame must always be before us in these times so complex and so uncertain through which we are passing.

"I am very pleased to see you here in greater numbers than ever before in this saloon of the Consul-General for I know that you are come to unite with us in an act of faith in the future of France, glorious and eternal. I salute among you more particularly the witnesses of the great war who have returned to Shanghai, some of whom bear noble wounds of the war. It is a great pleasure for us all to see in our midst the marines of France so worthily represented by Commandant de Marguerie and his officers: their presence is dear to us as a symbol of the national forces.

"Gentlemen, in inviting you to drink with me to the traditional toast of 'The first Mgistrate of the Republic, to M. Deschanel,' who adds to his high functions a new prestige, I beg of you to drink to the greatness of our so wellbeloved country."

ISSUE SPECIAL EDITION

An interesting feature of the day was the appearance of a special edition of the French newspaper L'Echo de Chine. The edition was printed in colors and contains some most interesting features. The publishers of the newspaper received many well deserved congratulations on their enterprise.

At 11:30 o'clock was another reception at the Cercle Francais and at 12:30 still another by the Cercle Sportif Francais.

Outdoor sports began at the Konkaza Gardens at 3:30 o'clock and afforded amusement for an immense crowd of all nationalities. There were tug-of war contests, high jumping, broad jumping, races, jet ball contests, pole climbing competitions, sack races, egg races and a score of other attractions that were of the keenest interest.

Probably the greatest sport of the afternoon from the spectators' standpoint was when the two fire departments pitted teams against each other in a "jet ball" game. A huge, light ball was placed on the pavement of the roadway and the teams faced each other, either side being armed with four lines of hose. At a signal the players dashed into a watery fray and sought to drive the ball, by means of jets of water, over the opponents goal.

FUN FOR SPECTATORS

The players were prepared for a wetting but not so the spectators and when they found themselves in the midst of an artificial deluge there was a wild, but hilarous scrambling for dry places.

The team from the International Settlement won the contest, which consisted of two periods of ten minutes each, by two goals to the French firemen made their opponents win, every foot they gained. It was a spirited contest and the best of good feeling prevailed between the teams throughout.

In the tug-of-war competitions the International Settlement did not fare so well. A picked team from the French fire department won twice in succession and with little trouble from a Settlement fire department team.

Then the French Marines defeated the French police, after which the French Chinese firemen defeated the Chinese firemen from Hongkew. As a result of these contests the Chinese Police and the Chinese firemen from the French departments entered into a competition. It was a hotly contested pull, the police winning the first honors but losing in the second and winning again in the third.

The broad jump honors went to Cirat and Goass, the high jump to Joanneau and the standing high jump to Esaurguest. All of the contestants were French marines.

CHINESE TAKE PART

Representatives of several Chinese organisations and street unions offered their congratulations to the French Consul yesterday. A short speech was delivered by one of the representatives.

Among the Chinese officials who called on the Consul-General were Mr. Hsu Yuan, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs and his secretaries, Messrs. S. K. Chen and N. T. Yang and Magistrate Shen Pao-chang of the Shanghai City.

Japan's Naval Budget Is 680,000,000 Yen

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 13.—Addressing the House of Representatives Budget Committee today, the Minister of the Navy stated that Japan's building capacity was two capital ships yearly.

The naval program, he continued, was not directed against any potential enemy but was dictated by the insular position of Japan, although the possibility of the despatch of a foreign force to the Orient had not been disregarded.

The present Budget provided for the building of four dreadnoughts, four battle-cruisers, twelve cruisers and other smaller craft and totalled 680,000,000 Yen.

The War Minister stated that military assistance to General Semenoff would cease as a result of Japan's withdrawal from the Zabaikal.

It is semi-officially explained that Viscount Uchida's former statement that Japan would not forsake General Semenoff is limited to the maintaining of a friendly attitude.

the semi-official version is described as "impressive."

The Socialist newspaper, Freiheit, sharply criticises Herr Stinnes, declaring that his attitude might have been all right at a meeting of shareholders but was entirely out of place in intercourse with the Allies.

VON SIMONS' VIEWS

Spa, July 11.—The communique issued this afternoon shows that, arising out of the solution of the coal question, Dr. von Simons displayed reluctance to submit the German reparation plans, as previously arranged.

He said he had just learned that the coal deliveries demanded exceeded double Germany's economic possibilities, and amounted to one third of her output. That would reduce the coefficient of satisfaction of her needs from 60 to 40 percent, while the German plans had been prepared on other bases.

After M. Millerand had expressed surprise at the German delegation's new standpoint the latter conferred. On resuming Dr. von Simons declared that, as the final decision with regard to deliveries was not being taken until tomorrow, when the experts report would be examined, the delegation would submit the plans which they had now prepared.

M. Millerand, replying to a remark regarding the object of the San Conference, said that there could be no question of modifying article 233 of the treaty, but the Allies had decided at San Remo that the treaty should be liberally and reasonably construed.

The Germans handed in their plans.

Austria Suspicious Of Hungarian Aims

Formation Near Border Of Legion Of Former Officers Causes Uneasiness

Vienna, June 2.—Complaint is being made by the Austrian Government that in Hungary a legion of former Austrian officers is being formed near the frontier which in case of need is to break into Austria and, further, that the Hungarian Government is supporting this movement with considerable sums.

It has been known for some time that a monarchistic propaganda was being carried on in Austria and that it found favor especially with officers who, since the breakup of the monarchy, have been in deplorable circumstances. Further, it is alleged that officers and men are recruited here by Bulgarian emissaries. Several hundred former Austrian officers are already in Hungary.

If frontier events are happening which are calculated to rouse the suspicions of the Austrian authorities certainly the Hungarian Government has nothing to do officially with this movemet, but it is thought it is extending moral support to it.

However, the prospect for such an uprising at present is small. In Austria the population is less adapted than the Germans for a Kapp coup, still such agitation is calculated to make trouble. The Socialists are anxiously watching the trend of affairs and their chief organ today already announces that the workingmen are ready to take up a life and death struggle for the republic.

Several former officers were arrested last week in Vienna and proof was found on them that they had taken part in plots.

RAILWAY SCHEME TOPIC AT CHEFOO

But Public Feeling Is In Favor Of Motor Road; Other News Notes

(China Press Correspondence)

There is again a revival of the railway scheme from here to Weihsien. Periodically this subject comes upon the tapis, but, owing to political difficulties, no progress is made with the plan of constructing the necessary line between the two cities.

At present feeling is against the making of the railway line and in favor of the construction of a good automobile road from Chefoo to Weihsien. It is considered that the possession of such a roadway and the running of automobiles with trucks attached, would be even more advantageous than the railway line; and, as there are obstacles in the way of acquiring the latter, the new idea seems to be the one for which Chefoo should agitate.

Chefoo, July 10.—The departure of the American torpedo boats on Thursday afternoon set Chefoo agog with excitement, and all sorts of conjectures are in the air as to what is likely to transpire in the North.

Quite a number of the wives of the American officers have been staying in Chefoo while the flotilla was here; and, in anticipation of the departure of the flotilla, passages had been booked for Tientsin.

When the command reached the flotilla, sending them north under sealed orders, the reservations for the wives had to be cancelled and, for the present, they are remaining in Chefoo.

In addition to the Huron and the Admiral's yacht, there is one torpedo boat still anchored out here. Just now she is refilling with oil from the supply ship.

Chefoo is shortly to bring out something in the nature of a guide book. It is stated that it will contain a short history of the principal industries carried on, in and around Chefoo. Numerous photographs have been sent in, but whether it will be possible to include them all is a problem.

The getting together of the matter has been no light task. The object of the brochure is to advertise Chefoo and make it better known amongst foreigners in the Orient.

Closing exercises of the Chinese schools are now being held. Only a couple of weeks back and the Temple Hill English School for Chinese had its commencement program. This, as usual, was high class and the various items rendered revealed the excellency of the work done in this important institution.

The principal and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Booth, are shortly leaving for a well-earned furlough in the United States.

Mr. Harold Smith of the Corbett Memorial Academy will be in charge of the two institutions during Mr. Booth's absence.

The Oxford local examinations, held annually at the China Inland Mission Schools, are due to commence next Monday week, the 10th inst. Then follows their closing exhibitions, which are held immediately before the Summer vacation.

Boycott Of Japanese Goods Still In Force In Kaying, Kwantung

(China Press Correspondence)

Kaying, (via Swatow), June 1.—The boycott of Japanese goods is being vigorously pursued in this section of Kwangtung province, as is evident by the events of the past days.

On May 30 at a place called Hin Ning, 40 miles from here and about 200 miles from Canton, an attempt was made by the merchant to bring in several thousand dollars worth of cotton yarn. The Canton Students' Union telegraphed to the Hin Ning organisation to be on the lookout for the goods. They were seized upon arrival but some of the material found its way into one of the large shops.

The students attempted to force an entrance, but were met by a phalanx of sharpened bamboo poles in the hands of a gang of clerks; with the result that eight students were injured badly and it is reported that one died since as a result of a cut throat.

CALL FOR HELP

A representation was sent here for help and the local Union decided to march en masse upon Hin Nang, with the idea of bringing the merchants to account for their misdeeds, and to arrange for a settlement of the matter.

Tomorrow 3,000 middle school boys from here will start. There may be trouble of a serious nature as the Hin Ning merchants have plenty of money. There is also danger of a clan fight as the shop that did the damage is a very strong clan, and such fights are serious in certain sections of this country.

If the Kaying and Hin Ning students are unable to force the issue, students from Canton and Swatow may be called.

The boycott was never more effective than now. In this city two weeks ago several hundred dollars worth of goods were burned and a merchant was fined $200 by the Students' Union.

This is almost a weekly occurence here.

The city Y.M.C.A. is doing very helpful work for the community this Summer. Just a week ago, a procession on public health, under the leadership of Mr. T. L. Ch'en, General Secretary, paraded throughout the Southwestern section of the city.

Similar processions were given at Hsiakwan last Wednesday. Yesterday afternoon, the Y.M.C.A. opened a summer restaurent where tea and refreshment can be secured at moderate price. On this opening day, over sixty members visited the restaurant and had supper there.

The children in the city are much more fortunate than in years past. Eight children vacation Bible schools have opened in the city. Five of them are run by University students.

The chief lessons taught are Bible stories, health and play.

At a weekly teachers meeting yesterday all teachers reported that the pupils in eight schools are taking an increasing interest in their lessons.

Many Notables Send Messages Of Sympathy; Funeral At Westminster

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 12.—Messages of condolence in the death of Admiral Lord Fisher are pouring in from all parts of the Empire.

The King, the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal family, Lord French and other military and naval officers have sent telegrams expressing their sympathy and regrets.

The public funeral will be held at Westminster Abbey at noon tomorrow, after which the body will be cremated at Golders Green and then conveyed to Kilverstone for interment.

The newspapers publish columns of appreciations and tributes to the "Nestor of the Navy."

PRESS COMMENTS

Daily Telegraph.—"Lord Fisher created an instrument which, in association with agencies, brought Germany's world ambitions to the dust."

Daily Mail.—"Lord Fisher was never afraid of risks. He took a responsibility before which others quailed, in sending the battle cruisers to destroy von Spee, though he thereby reduced the strength of the battle cruisers below the German strength."

(The Daily Mail publishes a pathetic letter dictated by Lord Fisher during his last illness, in which he complains of being forgotten).

Daily Express.—"Jacky" Fisher made many enemies, but in death no voice will be raised in the Empire to belittle his forceful career."

Daily Chronicle.—"His spirit of scientific daring which galvanised the Navy into new life, was the essence of its victory."

The Times.—"Lord Fisher's chief glory was that it was mainly owing to his reforms that we played the part we did in the war."

Lawn Bowls

(BY "SKIP")

Although there has been a tremendous lot of rain recently the competitions for the Open Championships seem to have been got through remarkably well.

On looking over the list of survivors for the next round I notice there are up to the time of writing only four unplayed ties in the Singles and four in the Pairs (who have until tomorrow to complete the second round) whilst the Rinks have but two. There must have been a lot of energy expended during the past week.

Left in the Singles are such players as MacGregor, Aitkenhead and Shaw, all past Champions, also Gavin Campbell, Stormes, Allen, etc. All good bowlers with more than an ordinary chance.

The Pairs are a mixed lot and there are many possibilities in this round, it would be a very delicate task to attempt to forecast the winners.

The Rinks have reached the semi-final stage, the two outstanding matches are being played today. Altogether the Association are to be congratulated on the efficient working of the competitions.

The next item of interest is the "Wallace" Cup competition. This Cup is to be competed for by all the four bowling clubs, who will each put in four rinks. Each rink will play its match on neutral greens and all matches will take place on the same afternoon and at the same time. The Club that wins by the biggest margin of points holds the Cup for one year and its name is inscribed thereon. It should prove a very interesting annual stunt and attract a lot of attention.

On Sunday afternoon (weather permitting) the Junior Golf Club will entertain the Yangtszepoolites at Hongkew Park and the Recreation Club will visit their near and dear neighbors the Lawn Bowls Club. Both are inter-club games and should turn out close.

I notice John Burnside is back again, he will be a great acquisition to the Junior Golf Club, who are very short of players this season and I hope to see him in their ranks on Sunday.

The draws for the third round of the Singles and Pairs Championship and the Semi-Final of the Rinks took place on Tuesday evening at the Recreation Club and resulted as follows:

SINGLES, 3rd ROUND

G. B. Stormes v. G. Wootten; G. Bloom v. R. Dorrance; N. David v. A. Allen; S. Marks v. W. T. Bisset; G. Dunlop v. G. L. Campbell or A. MacGregor; H. Smyth v. J. Munro; M. B. Anderson v. G. Manwaring or T. Harborne; C. Richards or R. Aitkenhead v. J. Shaw or Alb. Taylor.

To be played on ground of firs named by July 26 inclusive.

PAIRS, 3rd ROUND

F. Jones and H. Veitch v. A. Hayward and H. Macfarland or A. Taylor and F. Ferrier.

J. Grieve and R. Dorrance v. H. Smyth and N. David or T. Harborne and A. W. McCallum.

G. L. Campbell and J. Ross Young v. G. Stormes and J. Shaw.

J. T. Disseldorff and F. G. Banham v. R. C. Titkenhead and G. McMurdo.

To be played on ground of firs named by July 26 inclusive.

RINKS, SEMI-FINAL

G. L. Campbell or G. Manwaring's rink v. D. McAllister's rink.

Arch. Taylor's rink v. G. Stormes or R. Dorrance's rink.

To be played on neutral ground by July 26 inclusive.

French Boxing Champion Carpentier And His Bride, Who Recently Visited The U.S.A.

Here is a new photograph of Georges Carpentier, the sensational French boxer, and the young woman to whom he was recently married. The couple spent their honeymoon in the United States, where Carpentier signed up to meet Jack Dempsey in a championship contest to take place next October.

No Question What It's Made of

The ingredients are plainly stated on every tin of

and also in the advertising.

Choice whole wheat is separated into kernel and outer-coat—combined with a small amount of wholesome molasses, roasted separately and skilfully blended to give Postum a delicious, snappy flavour similar to high-grade Java coffee. But Postum is free from caffeine and tannin, the drugs that make coffee harmful.

Anyone with signs of nervousness, indigestion, heart flutter, sleeplessness or other ills so often caused by coffee, can learn something of value by quitting coffee and using Postum—

Delicious—Healthful—Economical

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled to bring out the rich flavour. 15c and 25c. packages.

Instant Postum—soluble form, made in the cup with hot water instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are delicious, cost per cup about the same, sold by Grocers everywhere.

SIMPLY LOVELY WHEN ICED!

The Foot-Path Way

The Foot-Path Way. By Henry Milner Rideout. Dufield and Co., $1.90.

Mr. Rideout is one of the writers who can always be depended upon to tell a lively story, and to tell it in a spirited and picturesque and colorful way. It is usually a story, moreover, which possesses the thrill and glamour of the East, interwoven with intrigue and adventure and daredevil courage, and this one is no exception to that rule. As a novel, "The Foot-Path Way" is very much open to criticism on the ground of construction; it too nearly resembles a series of detached episodes, or rather series of adventures, with one or more of the same characters appearing in each, instead of being a developed whole. The adventure of "The Golden Wreath," for instance, has little to do with that one which is entitled "After Dark," and still less with "Leda" or "The Captive" or "Runa's Holiday." But all the different episodes so very loosely strung together are interesting, and some of them are exciting. Daniel Towers, American, appears in all of them, and in the great majority we also meet the fascinating Runa la Fleche of Chandernagore and the British Secret Service, best and most reliable of friends and gayest of comrades, to whom adventures come inevitably and as a matter of course. He could not avoid them if he tried, and it must be admitted that he never does try very hard.

The scene is laid partly on the Malay coast and in an obscure Malayan village, but principally in India, one episode taking Towers, Runa and the reader to Benares. It was in the Malayan village that Towers found Leda, the daughter of the Lord Parimban, Leda who was made of "sugar and spice and gun-powder," as the wise old female missionary told him, and who was beautiful beyond all telling—a most embarrassing charge, in short, for a bachelor who was still fairly young. Dan presently man-contrived to dispose of Leda in a satisfactory manner—satisfactory at least to him and to the proprieties, and we hear little more of her until just before the end of the book, when she suddenly determines to avenge her murdered father. As Ibrahim's man says of her, she is one who "fears nothing, beast or man or both rolled into one. . . . If her soul tells her the world is wrong, she will take the world by the throat." Even the wicked headman, Nata Kasuma, who held an entire district in fear and trembling, could not terrify Leda, and it will easily be understood that Dan and Runa had their work cut out for them when they tried to cope with the hornet's nest of troubles into which she led them.

Meanwhile, and during the period of Leda's quiescence, the two friends had many and varied and often thrilling adventures. Haryseke, the queer little missionary, Amra Khan, the stately and devoted, with his background of treachery and tragedy and his belief that there must inevitably come a time when Dan and Runa would fight for the love of Leda, the alluring Widow Cuckoo-Tongue, who was utterly charming and had not the slightest objection to administering a dose of poison to any one who happened to be in her way, the profoundly bored Maharajah of Mayanganj and the very likable young English officer, Captain Weatherby, are some of the characters who enliven the romance. But when all is said the dominating personality is that of Runa la Fleche, gay, high-spirited, with a genius for disguising himself, lover of mystification, who always threw himself heart and soul into the part he was playing, and knew the world of native India so well that he was able to come and go in the bazars as he would. The tale is entertaining, swift-moving and romantic, and gives a colorful picture of adventurous lives.

THE ROMANTIC WOMAN

The Romantic Woman. By Mary Borden. New York: Alfred A. Knopf. $2. (gold).

The heroine of this novel, who has the romantic woman's uncomfortable characteristic of expecting from other people more than they have to give, is the daughter of a Chicago millionaire (though her home is called Iroquois there is no mistaking what is really meant), who marries a member of the English nobility and is deeply shocked by the way he and his relatives and cronies look on life. The romantic nature which prompts her continually to see something in others which isn't there brings her nothing but disillusion in England. Things which she was taught in Illinois to consider scared are treated by him and his with shocking levity. They take things for granted altogether too much. The upshot is that the heiress, after one great final shock, packs up her things and returns to her father's house in Chicago.

There her romantic nature finds about as little to satisfy it as it did among the decadent specimens of English nobility with whom she had been thrown. The manner in which the Chicagoans of her acquaintance do not take things for granted annoys her quite as much as the callous laissez faire spirit which she had found in London. Her husband suddenly appears in the Western metropolis, where he promptly proceeds to fall desperately in love with the wife of the Mayor. This puts the romantic woman into such a desperately complicated state of mind that it quite defies the author's powers of elucidation. In fact, a diagram of the heroine's soul, with a suitable key, should have been provided with this part of the book.

Eventually her husband gets a telegram which tells him that his uncle has died and that, in consequence, he is a Duke; his wife decides to "see it through" and stick to him, though she has been thinking seriously of divorce. She and the newly-made Duke return to England, where their home life is enlivened by the shooting of one of her girlhood friends by the latter's husband. The tragedy is hushed up, the war comes, and the romantic woman, under the stress of wartime emotions, becomes rather more indifferent, though by no means reconciled, and contemplates her wrecked life in a spirit of fatalistic aloofness.

Except where it becomes too involved the book is well written. Where its author has been most successful is in the atmosphere of dull discontent, of poignant disillusion, which she evokes throughout. She gives a depressing picture of the utter cynicism of the English high society into which her heroine falls, against which she sets with telling effect—and scarcely less depressingly—the rawness and childishness of the ultra rich set of Chicago.

There are neat characterisations, epigrammatic hits of phrasing and some passages written with unblushing frankness—in fact, for frankness concerning things usually veiled or ignored in conventional conversation the book stands high even in this age of audacity in thought and language.

PASSION

Passion. By Shaw Desmond. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $2 (Gold).

The title, particularly as tricked out in a cover design of black and red, may be a little misleading. Mr. Desmond's story deals with "the nervous, combative passion of the end of the nineteenth century," and particularly with the conflict between Big Business, the passion to get, and Art, the passion to create. A good deal of effort is spent on the depiction of Big Business in London at the turn of the century, and particularly of one Mandrill, the embodiment of its spirit. The hero's revolt against finance of the most frenzied character is plausible enough, but somehow the entire latter half of the book fails to carry very much conviction.

As for the first half, it would make more impression if it had come ten years sooner. Practically every literate person in the British Isles who has come to maturity since the accession of King George V. has felt it necessary to start off with an autobiography, beginning from the moment of birth and recounting pretty nearly everything that he thought or experienced for the next thirty years. Miss Dorothy Richardson's interminable series in which every psychosis is set down merely carries to an absurdity a fashion which has made the neo-Georgian literature interesting enough to its own generation, and will probably make it unreadable for our successors.

Mr. Desmond starts bravely with the days when he was "a fierce, green-eyed, angry baby, long and lean and bony, with a passion for biting," and goes on through the conventional conflicts with parents, the conventional respection of religion, and the conventional troubles in school. He takes occasion to assure us that "the child of today has leaped the centuries in a decade, leaving his progenitors on the other side;" and while it would be rash to say that the child of every generation in human history has thought that this was precisely what he had done, one may conjecture that, so far from being new, the thing has happened at least a hundred times in the six or seven thousand years since old men in Memphis and Lagash first shook their heads and wondered what the world was coming to, and young people beside the Nile and the Euphrates felicitated themselves upon the intuitive perception of absolute truth unrevealed to their parents.

The theme stales with constant repetition, and Mr. Desmond's autobiographical chapters, which might have been readable enough if they had anticipated other autobiographies, read like much that we have heard before. Yet there are mitigations; though his Irish hero's adolescence is filled with consciousness of sex, there is less practical experimentation than in the stories of his English contemporaries; and there are no chapters on the university. And the picture of the lonely Irish boy in London, living on fifteen shillings a week and desperately hungry for friendship, is the best part of the book. The Dickens tradition is strong here, but the performance is not unworthy of it; Mr. Desmond is a little unhappy when he goes in for symbolic satanism, but the episode of Miss Ella is really brilliant. One feels that he is not devoid of the divine fire, but he needs a better boiler under which to build it.

SWATTY

Swatty. By Ellis Parker Butler. Illustrated. Houghton Mifflin Co.

Mr. Ellis Parker Butler's "Swatty" is described by the publishers as "a story of real boys." Swatty's best friend, Georgie, narrates their many and varied adventures. First there is the tale of how the ice went out of the Mississippi, and Georgie and Swatty very nearly went with it, being rescued only after much excitement and difficulty. Then having thus narrowly escaped drowning, they tried burning, and in the endeavor to secure some paper dolls for Mamie Little, who was "Georgie's secret girl," went into Swatty's father's shop while the house next door to it was blazing merrily. An encounter with a fire hose served to eject both Swatty and Georgie from the premises in a forcible and very rapid manner.

"Bony," so called because when reading aloud "a piece out of the Reader," he said "bony Highlander" instead of bonny, was another great friend both of Georgie and Swatty. Bony's father and mother did not get along well together, but quarreled most of the time, and at last actually went so far as to talk of getting a divorce, to the great distress of Bony and his friends. Moreover, there was a question of a tandem bicycle, which particularly interested Georgie. So the three went to work to put a stop to the divorce proceedings. In this they were more successful than they were later, when the threatened advent of a new baby caused them to take strong, not to say violent, measures to prevent the objectionable arrival. Meanwhile a new girl had come upon the scene, one whose behavior caused her to be promptly and appropriately nicknamed "Scratch-Cat." Then there was the theft of "The Cardinal's Signet Ring" and the adventure of the hunted house, and an experience with a dynamiter, and a visit to the circus, and many other exciting and agreeable happenings. Most of the adventures of Swatty and his friends came from outside, rather than from their own propensity to mischief, and they do not seem to have been a particularly imaginative set of boys. The humor of the book is broad and obvious rather than whimsical, but Mr. Butler's admirers will probably enjoy it.

A COMMON ERROR.

About the Digestion

Many people so far misunderstand the digestive system as to treat it like a machine; neglecting it until it works sluggishly, then irritating it into work again. The stomach certainly needs help at times, but a study of the process of digestion will show that purgatives, as commonly taken, are seldom necessary.

To safeguard your digestion the diet must be controlled. Overeating is always harmful, but one must assimilate enough food to supply the needs of the blood. Remember, the blood has to carry nourishment all over the body, find fuel for the energy, and defence against its enemies, as well as the requisite juices for digestion. Hence, when the blood becomes weak and fails to do its work, indigestion arises; also, when indigestion begins the blood suffers. Therefore, the treatment of indigestion and stomach-sluggishness demands something more effective than purgatives.

If you suffer from any form of indigestion choose your diet carefully and take wholesome nourishment. Above all, start building up your blood by taking a course of Dr. Williams' pink pills. Then, under the influence of the regenerated blood, your digestive system will respond naturally, your appetite will improve, and your food will do you good.

Digestive debility has often resulted from the use of purgatives, but only benefit can accrue from regenerating the blood, therefore begin Dr. Williams' pink pills, now. You can obtain the pills from dealers everywhere, or from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, at $1.50 the bottle, $30 for 6 bottles, post free.

Tuan, Anti-Japanese, Says Doctor Sun, Who Sees No End In Present Conflict

DOCTOR SUN'S MESSAGE

A translation of Dr. Sun's message to the Japanese War Minister follows:

"It has been a year since I have lived in retirement in Shanghai and I refrain from meddling in the political situation. However, I have been intensely interested in the development of international relations and the changes in the world movements. As to the danger of the Far Eastern question and the bad feeling existing between the two leading countries, they concern me very much and I have from time to time sought means of relief.

"I have had occasion to impart my views to my Japanese friends who call on me. Now the hour is pressing. The origin of the unpleasant relationship lies in a great measure with the policy of Japan. Japan is the strong nation of the Far East and the premier country in the continent of Asia. Supported by her military, naval and financial power, she claims a special position in the Orient. The status of the smaller and weaker nations here depends entirely upon the pleasure of the Japanese.

"As far as my personal knowledge goes, the administrative policy of Japan often hinges on the views of the army and its leaders. Her policy on the continent especially is guided by the moves of the military authorities.

OFFERS HIS VIEWS

"You being the supreme commander of the military administration in Japan, in fact, can sway the hands of all the officials and work out a definite policy of your own. You, better than any one else, know my ideals thoroughly. Therefore I desire to present you my present views and aspirations and enumerate them below:

"The recent policy of Japan on the Continent of Asia is one of military and capitalistic aggression. This is within the knowledge of the world. Towards China, Japan, in order to realise her aims, often supports the conservative and oppressive forces to oppose re-constructive movements.

"Japan began by aiding Yuan Shih-kai, thus creating the internal strife in 1915 and 1916. When the monarchial movement was instigated, spontaneous indignation was engendered among the Chinese public and Japanese public opinion also disapproved Yuan. The Japanese authorities realising that Yuan could never again enjoy the confidence of his people, quickly sought the good will of the people by attacking Yuan in order to increase her influence in the country.

"Yet Japan did not desire to see China in her new garb of Republicanism. So she utilised the services of Tsen Chun-hsuan, who in all respect is more contemptible than Yuan, and made him head of the Southern faction. On the Northern side, she supplied the monarchists with arms and munitions as well as money, giving the people of China endless trouble.

TRACES HISTORY

"As the first man in the Japanese Army, I am sure you can remember these happenings. When Yuan died, the Tokio Government turned towards the Peiyang Party because of its military power and supported Tuan Chi-jui. The defection of General Li Yung-hung, and the discolution of the old Parliament were both the result of the Japanese pro-Tuan policy.

"The monarchial movement of Chang Hsun was said to be endorsed by the influential politicians of Japan. During the movement, you happened to be touring China. The catastrophe came only a few days after you left. It was suspected that you had a great deal to do with Chang Hsun's plans. While I cannot believe the truth of the accusation, I am unable to pronounce the statement as false. Because any monarchial movement in China must have some bearing on the policy of the militarists in Japan.

"Following the dissolution of Parliament by the militarists, I was duty bound to exert myself to defend the Constitution. Gathering together my colleagues, I brought the Navy to the South and established the Military Government in Canton. Japan, while loud in the statements that she will keep aloof from China's domestic affairs, actually supported Tuan in his efforts to suppress the Kuomingtang by supplying him with arms and finance. Japan continuously helped the Peking Government and prolonged internal strife. Even today her evil is still felt.

ISSUED MANIFESTO

"When I was heading the military Government, I had occasion to issue a manifesto to the different governments setting forth our aim in defending the Constitution. Every other nation accepted the note, but Japan rejected it.

"From past experience, there is no denial that Japan also clung to the policy of assisting the opponents of China's efforts to realise a democracy.

"Then the Constitutionalists' Army was organised, internal war was waged for two years. Japan's policy during this period was mediation in name, and pro-Tuan in action. During the last few months, Tuan realised the futility of warfare and the popular disapproval of militarism. He recanted his past acts and was willing to conclude peace with the Kuomingtang. He desired to suspend the hostilities and introduce civil administration in China.

"But before we had a chance to begin negotiations, obstructions came in sight. Chang Tso-lin suddenly went to Peking. It is reported that the aim of Chang's mission was to prevent the Kuomingtang from concluding peace with Tuan. His mission was further connected with the monarchial movement. We are not inclined to believe the reports, but when we consider what Chang Hsun did after his march to Peking in 1917, we begin to be most suspicious.

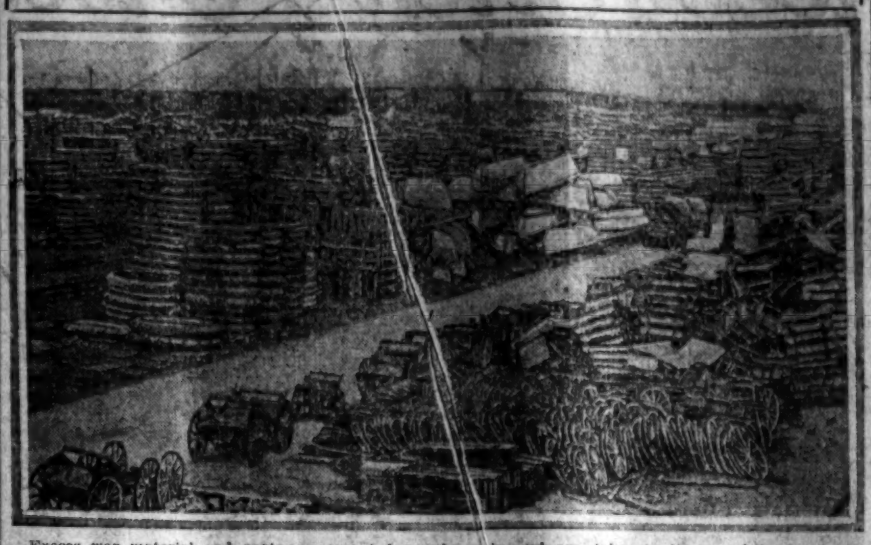
"Chang was originally a notorious bandit. The honors and ranks which he has succeeded in acquiring were secured through Japanese aid. One of my Japanese friends who served as a Cabinet minister once told me that Chang was the barometer of Japanese policy in China and there is no act of Chang's which is not prompted by Japanese instigation. To this I agree perfectly. The conduct of Chang for the last several months convinces me. His trip to Peking, even if it was not instigated by Japan must be endorsed by Tokio. If the report proves true, Japan is today repeating the same intrigue through Chang as she carried out through Tuan sometime ago, to disturb the peace and tranquility of the Chinese people.

"I am much grieved over the future of China and the future of the peace of the Far East. The anti-Japanese feeling of the Chinese is increasing daily. The original cause, of course, is the policy of Japan in oppressing the Chinese and in opposing their democratic arpirations. Chinese consider Japanese hostile to the democratic form of Government. If your country continued to disturb China this feeling of antagonism will increase and will manifest itself, not only in the form of boycotts, but in greater disasters.

"As I said, you are the head of the military establishment in Japan and control the administrative bureaus of the country, you should at least be aware of the world situation, and the importance of the maintenance of peace in the Far East. You should change your policy at once and put a check to Chang Tso-lin's intrigue. This will soften the antagonistic feeling of the people and gradually improve the relations of the nations.

"You were one of those who ardently advocated permanent peace in the Far East. It is my sincere hope that you will consider this carefully and plan your policy wisely."

Government Supplies, Worth Millions, Exposed To Elements



Excess war material and parts taken from dismantled transports of the United States is piled high on the ground at Port Newark, N. J. These supplies are unprotected from the rain and are rapidly getting into a condition where they will become junk. No action, it is said, has been taken to dispose of this enormous amount of property, the value of which is estimated far into the millions.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent, or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent, or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy and retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse. It causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Castoria is good for children and I frequently prescribe it, and always obtain the desired result."
F. GERALD BLATTNER, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."
J. S. ALEXANDER, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed Castoria to families for several years. It is all right. Mothers like it, for children will take it without any trouble."
C. A. WILSON, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Have used your Castoria on various occasions in suitable cases and have found it a palatable and efficient laxative, especially in the various diseases of childhood."
CHAS. EDWARD GARDINER, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Sweet Romance of a Stick of Chocolate Candy

Welcoming a Returning Troop Ship from the Deck of a K. of C. Boat.

How the Oddest Missile Cupid Ever Used Flew from the Hand of a Pretty War-Worker Straight Into the Eye of Her Future Husband

CUPID is a good shot. This fact has been attested for many centuries. The ancients conceived his missiles to be cute little arrows. Modern science has declared that the Cupid of the cave-man used a club. In the unique romance to be described his devastating dart appears to have been a compromise between the sweet little shaft and the rougher cudgel.

For Sergeant Webb, the Texas hero of this story, was struck vigorously in the eye by a bar of chocolate hurled by Miss Lester, the heroine! Love rode upon the flying candy. Cupid steered its flight. It closed the sergeant's eye, but it opened his heart. Followed meeting, wooing and winning!

It was after dawn on one of the few sunny early Spring mornings that the Leviathan nosed her way up New York's lower bay. Her decks were filled with stalwart ranks of Uncle Sam's boys returning from the war, every one of them eager for a glimpse of the great man-made cliffs of Manhattan, which symbolized for them their country. They were still a few hours out, but throughout the ship thrilled the spirit of homecoming.

"Suppose they'll meet us in the bay?" one asked.

"Sure they will—and I'll bet the K. of C. boat will be the first to see us," another answered.

And a little while later Miss Mabel Lester, a very pretty stenographer in the Knights of Columbus office on Fortieth street, near Broadway, sat at her typewriting machine. Mrs. Mackin, the supervisor of the girls in the office, dropped over to her.

"Mabel, would you like to go out with the boat that is going to meet the Twenty-seventh Division?" she said. "We're short a girl or two and the boys do like to see pretty faces smiling at them."

"I'd love to go," responded Miss Lester. "I've a friend in Chicago whose son is coming back on that boat. She asked me to see him when he came through."

Mabel put on her hat, filled her handbag from the store of chocolates and cigarettes kept in the K. of C. rooms for just such glad homecomings, and subwayed down to the Battery. Being a thoughtful young woman she had selected the biggest, heaviest blocks of chocolate which she could find—but of this more later.

Down the bay went the welcoming boat on which she was a passenger, and soon the giant hulk of the Leviathan loomed up ahead of them. Close to it drew the K. of C. boat. There swelled out a chorus of glad cries of greeting and of welcoming. Now only twenty feet of waves separated the two craft. Upon the K. of C. boat placards began to be lifted.

"Is Jack Collins there?"

"Hello, mother!" shouted one of the soldiers in return.

Dozens of the cards went up. Discipline was forgotten.

Miss Lester pushed her card higher. It read: "Hello, John Mooreland"—for John Mooreland was the name of the son of the Chicago friend for whom she had been asked to look.

There was no response to the silent cry. And, after a little, the boats nearing the dock, Miss Lester determined to help swell the rain of candy and cigarettes now dropping like a real shower upon the lower decks of the Leviathan and being eagerly grasped by the returning heroes. So she placed the John Mooreland placard on a campstool, drew out the biggest block of chocolate she could find, and hurled it into the mass of faces and hands stretched out to her.

She heard a shout—"Rough stuff!"—and a chorus of laughter. She glimpsed a tall figure ruefully rubbing an eye and her big block of chocolate clasped firmly in his other hand.

"Some shot! You gave the sergeant a shiner!" came the chorus.

Miss Lester, realizing what she had done, gasped and fled. With an accuracy of aim which had she meant it she could never have attained she had hit Sergeant Webb squarely in one bright, blue eye. And if she could have gotten closer she would have seen a dark mark, not at all due to the chocolate, beginning to encircle that smarting optic!

Miss Lester, from another point of vantage, threw the balance of her sweets and cigarettes and then made her way to the Hoboken station. The dock was crowded with innumerable khaki figures, and through them she pressed her way to the station whence the soldiers would entrain for Camp Merritt. Under her arm was the placard that held the name of John Mooreland.

Ahead of her loomed a tall figure. Just why she came to her decision Miss Lester can not to this day tell. Cupid could, probably. At any rate, she made up her mind that this was the man she was going to ask what had become of John Mooreland. She slipped to him, touched him on the arm. He turned.

Two bright blue eyes, one of them puffed, half closed and encircled with a darkening ring, looked down upon her quizzically! It was the very man she had hit with the chocolate! There was the eye in proof of it! She turned to flee—for she was very sure that he had seen the thrower of the candy. The smile that came over his face reassured her profoundly. Also she was suddenly aware that she did not want to run away.

"It's all right. It was a perfectly good shot and the candy was also perfectly good. Don't you mind about that. What can I do for you?"

"I never meant to hit you so hard," gasped Miss Lester.

"I'd rather be hit by a brick from you than by a handful of pearls from Cleopatra," said Sergeant Webb—not in quite these words, be it understood, but with wholeheartedly the same meaning in what he did say. It sounded very good to the repentant Miss Lester.

"I am looking for a soldier named John Mooreland. He came from Chicago," she said.

A grimness banished the smile from Sergeant Webb's face.

"Did you know him?" she went on.

Sergeant Webb seemed to be fighting against some emotion. He looked at her very oddly, she thought.

"Yes," he said at last quietly. "I knew him very well. He was my buddie." Miss Lester knew that term meant in the army slang the comrade, the companion at whose side one fought.

"Where is he?" she asked.

Again he hesitated.

"He—he—I think he got off at Boston," he said.

"But there is some mistake about that. He would not have done that. He would have landed right here and gone straight to his mother in Chicago," objected Miss Lester.

Again there was that curious hesitation on the part of the big sergeant.

"Are you his sister?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"His—sweetheart?"

"No!" exclaimed Miss Lester. "I am only a friend of his mother's and I want to send her news of him."

The sergeant's eyes took on that still gaze of the warrior who looks upon death.

"He died of wounds two months ago," he answered at last.

Tears fell from her eyes.

"Do you think his mother would like to see some snapshots of him?" he asked.

"I am sure she would. Poor woman! I will give you her address"——

"Wouldn't she rather receive them directly from you? If you will allow me, I will bring them to you wherever you say."

Mrs. Horton Webb, the Heroine of the War's Chocolate Candy Romance.

So it was arranged that he would call at her home, No. 552 Humboldt street, Brooklyn, the first evening he could get leave. He would telephone her during the day at the K. of C. rooms.

He called the next evening. They scanned the photographs. "Poor old John!" They talked of his virtues and were silent about his faults.

Miss Lester promised to send the photographs to Mrs. Mooreland and write a letter as comforting as the tragic circumstances permitted. She presented him to her invalid father, who listened eagerly to the humor and the tragedy of war.

"May I call again and tell your father more about life on the other side?" he asked her.

They saw each other every day for weeks. When he had twice told her father of all his experiences in the world war he invited her to see a play with him.

"It's lonesome for a fellow to see a play alone," he complained. "I don't know a soul in the big burg except you and your father. I wish he weren't bedridden. We could take him with us."

There were plays and motion pictures and luncheons and dinners. Cupid is a dexterous little artist. In half of three months he can do a lot of mischievous work. When Sergeant Webb was discharged from the service and came to say good-by there was much beside that he wished to say that had to remain unsaid. The girl's father had been an invalid for ten years. He needed his daughter. That was obvious. It was clear, too, that the sick man could not endure a journey to Sherman, Texas.

Sergeant Horton Webb's demobilization was affected without any declaration on his part, save that in his eyes and in the long hand pressure when he said "good-by." Yet Cupid is the greatest of all linguists.

A glance he has translated into a book of poems. A sigh he has converted into a three-part novel. Miss Lester understood.

She sat at her typewriter in the K. of C. offices all day. In the evening she read to her father or talked to him. It was amazing how often he spoke of "that soldier chap friend of yours in Texas. Have you heard from him?" And she usually answered, "Just the other day, father." "How often does he write you, daughter?" "Once a week, sometimes twice, daddy." "People of the South are very friendly." "Yes, daddy."

Her father's strength fast failed. On Christmas Eve he said "good-night, daughter." It was for the last time.

She did not write to the Texan until after the New Year. Then she thanked him for the souvenir that had come from Texas and wished him a Happy New Year. In the last paragraph of her letter she said: "As for me, Christmas was not merry and the New Year was not happy. My father left me on Christmas Eve."

The former member of the American Expeditionary Forces lost no time in replying to that letter. His reply said that she must have understood he loved her. "As I have ever since you swatted me in the eye with that cake of chocolate," he said. "I thought I would be the happiest man in the world if you would strike me in the face with chocolate from one of your soft little palms every day of my life.

Did Miss Lester accept the soldierly proposal? Not precipitately. Her friend, Mrs. Mackin, said: "It was through me that you met Mr. Webb. It is up to me to find out whether he is the kind of a man who is worthy of you and will make you happy."

"But I know that already, dear Mrs. Mackin," Miss Lester spoke with tender conviction.

"Not in the way I want to know," answered Mrs. Mackin. "I'm going to have him looked up. I will write to the K. of C. officials at Sherman.

"Please, dear Mrs. Mackin, don't do anything that will embarrass him."

"Not a thing, my dear. This is usual." Mrs. Mackin patted her shoulder. "But I would rather he were embarrassed than you."

The "report" on the former sergeant was an eulogy. He was a fine, steady young man of most exemplary habits. He was in comfortable circumstances. His immediate family consists of his mother. He kept a garage at Sherman."

Miss Lester's answer must have been quite to the soldier's expectations. At once he set about building a home. The building was contemporaneous with Miss Lester's preparation of her trousseau.

On April 17, the other K. of C. girls, headed by the capable Mrs. Mackin gave her a theatre party and a dinner. On Sunday, April 18, she took a train for St. Louis. She was entertained by a K. of C. family. On Wednesday, April 21, she forsook the estate of Miss Lester and became Mrs. Horton Webb. A local Knight of Columbus gave the bride away.

The match made indirectly by the K. of C. and directly by the misflung cake of chocolate, prospers. Mrs. Webb writes that her home in the Southwest is charming and her husband "simply adorable."

Exchange Market

Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand's exchange circular for week ending Wednesday, July 14, states:

Exchange:—After touching 54d. on the 9th inst. the London price of silver fell to 52¼d. on the 10th inst., but has again recovered to 53⅝d. i.e. 1⅜d. higher than last week's closing quotation. The rate for forward silver has ruled 1¼d. below the "spot" prices quoted above.

Our exchange market has been dull throughout the week. The Gold dealers again made sales of T.T. on London and after remaining unchanged at 5/0, T.T. on London, the official quotation was raised on the 13th inst. 2d. to 5/2. Since the rise the market has been on the easy side. Today the gold dealers are inclined to buy and the market closes weak.

Local stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver, Tls. 37,945,000 an increase of Tls. 1,625,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars, $20,240,000 an increase of $490,000.

Estimated total value in Taels 52,700,000 on increase of Tls. 2,000,000.

Siccawei Weather Reports

13.—Formosa cuts the typhoon in two centers: the one continues towards the Pratas and threatens Kwangtung; the other which may grow the principal, inclines to N.N.W. and advances between Formosa and the Loochoos, menacing the Eastern sea, and may be our own coast to the N. of the Formosa Strait. The day is hot, but very fine, with fresh S.S.E. monsoon.

14.—Early hours still fine, but with more moisture. The monsoon nearly dies and the breeze is gradually backing to the E. The pressure decreases slowly.

WEATHER

The typhoon will continue to cross the Eastern Sea in a Northwest or North-Northwest direction. Rough weather and possibly gales between the Saddles, the Loochoos and the Gota Islands. Squalls and probably showers at Shanghai.

The Peking Spectacle

SLOWLY the morbid and sordid drama in Peking unfolds. How it is going to end nobody knows. Field Marshal Tuan Chi-jui and his active and sinister adjutant, Little Hsu, are the villains in the play so far as it has been disclosed, but they are getting their punishment in the early acts instead of in the conventional last act. The public is well pleased to see them getting any punishment at all. The local student population is elate. The students feel that the Anfu Club is no longer The Big Stick in China and they celebrate while they may, although they probably realise that if the Anfu Club goes, another one not perceptibly different will take its place.

What has happened to Tuan and Little Hsu is that their rivals have moved too rapidly for them. Tsao Kun, Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu have seized control of the railroads and their troops seem good enough to hold them. This places Tuan and Little Hsu at their mercy for the time being.

President Hsu Shih-chang looms dismally in the picture. If Tuan is surrounded he still has his troops at and near Peking so that he can still, for awhile, put the screws on the old President, and this he is doing from day to day. He is at present trying to force President Hsu to issue a Mandate making him Military Dictator. He has already got the President to issue a mandate forbidding hostilities. He did this because he is in no position to fight, but if he can choke a mandate for the dictatorship out of Hsu he will have a stronger legal footing in the events that follow. He would have Wu Pei-fu in the position of refusing to obey a presidential mandate. Of course none of the Tuchuns ever obeys a presidential mandate unless he wants to do so, and Tuan least of all, but that makes no difference in the present struggle for tactical rectitude.

Of one thing we may be sure: The matter is not going to be settled by presidential mandates. The tuchuns themselves will arrange a compromise or there will be a fight. If they were prepared to obey the orders of their government there wouldn't be any trouble. It is because the militarists persist in giving orders to the President, Cabinet and Parliament, instead of taking them from those departments of government that the trouble continues.

The League of Nations, despite many setbacks, is making headway, and it is to this league rather than to any of the figures prominent in the present crisis, that China must look for peace. When it takes the Chinese army out of control of the tuchunate, reorganises it and acquaints it with its proper function, there will be peace in China, and along with peace will come development and progress. The people of China now have a properly organised international body to appeal to against the oppressions of their own militarists and they should not delay making that appeal.

Today, and after a lapse of years, the Shamrock IV. will make another attempt to win the great Yacht Race and take that cup back to England.

Sir Thomas Lipton sailed for the U.S.A. on the Celtic last month in order to see that everything was ship shape and to watch the trials.

"What are my chances," he said, just before sailing. "Well, I am very confident this time. I have just been handed a cablegram from the United States stating that Shamrock IV has had her first really good sail test, and the result has been most satisfactory.

"I have a better chance than ever I had. Shamrock IV is a splendid craft and bears the very latest improvements. We have not had the cup here since 1851, and I hope you will be here to see me when I bring it back.

"I have had an offer of a jet black child, with red hair, from America, as a mascot," he added smiling.

Tommy Lipton is a trier. Sometime today the wires will be buzzing out the news as to who is victor. If Shamrock IV is the first to catch the judge's eye I fancy that Americans, as well as British, will rejoice in the Irish Tea-King's success. He is certainly a believer in the maxim: If at first you don't succeed, try, try, try again.

THE REASON WHY

The question was asked, "Why was Mary Queen of Scots born at Linlithgow?" Sandy Kerr promptly answered "Because her mother was staying there, sir"—and there actually seems to be nothing more to say upon the subject.

Dean Of Yale Sees Terrifying Lessening Of Morality Standards

BY JOHN FARRAR
(New York World)

"Pleasure hysteria, inability to concentrate, self-indulgence and degenerating ideals are possessing the youth of the country. This fact is more spectacularly evident in Europe, but it is becoming alarmingly obvious at home. Can the education of our schools and colleges check this? If it were the result of the war alone, possibly; but the loosening of moral standards has long been evident. War simply hastened the climax. Our educational system may have been faulty, but the mental and physical characteristics of a man are first founded not in school but in the home. How seriously do Americans take the business of bringing up children? Is it too late to combat this modern social degeneracy by educating parents?"

The Dean of Yale College can speak from the experience of a lifelong contact with the representative youth of the country and their families. Frederick Schoetz Jones became Dean of Yale in 1909. Before that he had been Dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Minnesota; before that, a professor of physics. A student at Yale, in Germany and in Switzerland, he has had a wide contact with education and affairs.

I found him in old Connecticut Hall on the campus at New Haven, with its memories of Nathan Hale and its traditions of New England conservatism.

"Come in!"

The voice is gruff and burly. Those are famous words at New Haven. They summon the guilty freshman to an accounting and even quake the knees of proud but delinquent seniors as the old white door opens and they step into that dim colonial room.

Dean Jones is a commanding figure—white hair, ruddy, smooth, powerfully lined face, the body of an athlete, the voice of a Westerner. To the college boy who sees in him the relentless Judge there suddenly comes a surprise, when occasion proves him the gentlest and most sympathetic of friends. The present situation strikes him as serious, and he says so in plain language. His views may seem pessimistic, but they are shared by many of our greatest educators and students of social conditions. A dominating man and a leader, Dean Jones does not mince words. I have attempted to transcribe the essence of what he said. It would be practically impossible to reproduce faithfully that rugged, quick, decisive style.

"It is astonishing how much faith many parents have that Divine Providence will bring up their children. They are becoming more and more indulgent. There is no longer insistence on the sacredness of the moral code. When something is twisted in a boy's life, if he gives you his full confidence, you may be practically sure that his trouble can be traced to some peculiarity, neglect or blindness in his home training. Unfortunately, the training of parents is not always negative; the blind imparting of worldly ambitions is too characteristic of the American family.

"As I sit in this office I suppose that I see fathers and mothers at their best. Anxious, loving, interested in the welfare of their boys; even the most worldly of them are at the moment real parents, willing to undergo any hardships for the future of their children. Far too often, however, their blind ambitions show. They want their boy to enjoy social and financial success. They accept moral delinquencies with little more than a formal protest. When a boy is called to this office for a reprimand I not infrequently get the reply. 'But, sir, they don't say anything to me when I do that at home.'

"Of the failures of parents in a negative sense, the most apparent are the neglect of physical and sex education.

"In how many average modern homes is the physical development of a child thoroughly considered? It usually comes in hit or miss fashion—play on the street or normal interest in athletics. If a boy is not naturally fond of games, he suffers. Except in private schools, there is little chance of correcting a lack of physical development. Our high schools, with a few exceptions, do not, perhaps cannot, assume any personal relation in regard to individual physical development. It is only recently that the colleges undertook an active campaign of intimate personal supervision of exercise. By no means all of them do it now; and what if they do? The habit of physical exercise is one to be formed early and in the home. The present disorder of the world is, I judge, a nervous one—and at the root of frayed nerves lies a frayed physique.

"Sex education is much better than formerly; but this is one task that I believe very firmly must be done in the home and not by outsiders. There is a shyness on the part of children and a false modesty on the part of parents that has in the past, and does even now, make it possible for boy after boy to come to me in trouble who has never had the subject mentioned to him by his father. This is particularly tragic when one realises that in practically every case I have known where a father has taken a firm normal attitude in teaching sex and has followed it through with intelligent care and a companionship favoring confidence, his boy has been at least free from any sex curiosity or morbidness and has usually come out on the top of the moral heap.

"The Rotary Clubs are sending a man around the country lecturing on just this subject. He will undoubtedly do much good, but I noticed at one of his lectures here that his audience was made up largely of older men. It is the parents of young boys he needs to reach.

"These are definite defects. They can, therefore, to some extent, be definitely remedied by education. It is a more subtle influence, I believe, that is bringing about the decay of the national conscience. It is the acquiescence of parents to the loosening standards of morality. In that fact we face a dangerous and terrifying progression. The children of today are the parents of tomorrow. Will they in turn acquiesce to continually lowering standards? What will then be the result? So-called modern 'liberty' is fast approaching license. It seems to me at times that the very core of our civilisation is at stake.

"The crazy seeking after gayety, the rush of social activity, the liberty between man and woman, increase in dishonesty and in all forms of crime and nervous disease—these are not confined to our youth or our college towns, to our cities or to any one class of society. They are Nation-wide and world-wide.

"Undoubtedly it is an after-war mania. It began before the war, however, and is there any sign of cessation? Can we place a corrective for the youth when the whole world is caught in the same whirlpool?

"Sisley Huddleston in this month's Atlantic Monthly attempts to analyse this condition, which he calls 'The Menace of the World.' He is talking, as it happens, of Europe; but we cannot fail to see the application. He says:

"The diagnosis of the malady is not difficult. There is, first, this crazy seeking after artificial amusements, generally of an unpleasant kind; there is a love of display that runs to the utmost eccentricity; there is a wave of criminality; there is an unscrupulous profiteering, a cynical disregard of suffering, a mad desire to set rich quickly, no matter by what means, and there is a reluctance to do any genuine work. You can visit any capital and you will find these characteristic stigmata. This pathological condition is certainly the legacy of war. Men's mental outlook has changed. Those who were sober, industrious citizens, content to rear up their families and to walk usefully and humbly in the world, are now stricken by the wild notion of having a 'good time'—a good time that means the easy earning of questionable money, its prodigal dispersal, forgetfulness of the family, non-production of necessaries, hopeless confusion and incompetence, which affects private as well as governmental persons, and a lowering of moral values, a debasing of intellect."

"He goes on to say that this is, of course, not a complete picture, that it is too much of a generalisation, but that the specific trouble exists. Then he points out, that while it was natural to indulge in a 'joy burst' immediately after the war, the condition is being alarmingly prolonged. 'A passing fever was nothing, but a chronic St. Vitus's dance is deplorable.'

"I have quoted Mr. Huddleston for two reasons. I want to show that I am not speaking of a locally observed condition. I would like to think that we are perhaps a bit better off than some other places. Further, however, I wanted to show that the general belief is that this 'epidemic of gayety' is a result of the war.

"It all began, I believe, long before the war. Such tendencies are perhaps more easily observed in the young, and the change was at first more noticeable in young girls than in men, and I am convinced that it has come about gradually during the last ten years, and largely because of the influence of the dancing craze, the automobile and the moving picture. The parents of the country were not courageous enough to take a definite stand against the increasing gayety, and hence the result.

"About eight or nine years ago the popular vogue of the 'new' dances commenced. Right then was the beginning of the lowering standards. At first the more conservative parents were obdurate, but gradually they acquiesced until not only do we have the dance craze developed to its nth degree, but we have various other evils in its train. Chief among these are the appearance and actions of the modern girl and the growing popularity of the 'public dance hall.'

"Tolerance has extended so far that boys are no longer ashamed of their faults. Often they actually argue in defense of them. There are those who call me old-fashiond, but I still think that if a college boy goes to a public dance hall he ought to keep the fact dark, and of further licenses he should be heartily ashamed. Some people believe this new tolerance toward sex infractions to be simply broadminded, that an attitude such as mine is hypocritical. Isn't it self evident that a commandment broken, with an ideal preserved, is less likely to lead to the sinning habit than no commandment at all?

"The moving picture was developed long before the war, and although there is nothing intrinsically vicious in the film play, it began the habit that has grown on us of wasting our spare time. That has grown to a point where, I think, most people will acknowledge that we are wasting much time that is not 'spare.' This and the dancing craze are true of all classes. A colored servant told me only the other day that her daughter must have time to 'go to the movies' and that she must have her 'dancing shoes.'

"The automobile in the hands of a young man is a serious calamity. It again not only furnishes an excuse for waste time, but it has a definite and very real bearing on the sex problem, and it gives a certain carelessness of demeanor and a desire for speed that, while it is impossible to define as an influence, is quite easily discernible. In order that a boy may have an automobile in Yale, I require a written letter from the father stating that he wants him to have a car. This deters some, but by no means all, and practically all the boys who can afford it have cars at home.

"The morals of the college man have, I think, been in the past well above the average. I believe this still to be true. That does not argue well for the morals of the rest of the country. We are approaching a moral crisis, nor do I think we can avoid it by educating.

"There was a time when I thought that we must teach in college first and foremost the learning of books. In these days I would bend every effort to the making of good citizens, and by a good citizen I think I mean 'a man who is master of himself, earns his own living and as far as possible in doing it, is of benefit to his fellow-men.'

"That we can educate parents now I gravely doubt. It is too late. Many of them are too old to mend their ways. This crisis in the form of a great reformation will come, I am afraid, too soon. Those who commit sins must suffer for them. We have sinned, and I believe we are going to suffer.

"I should be interested to have some one, who knows more of history than I do, trace the steps that have led up to the great reformation periods in history. It would not be surprising if he found conditions similar to those of today.

"When we have all known that it is to starve, when rich and poor alike go hungry and are forced by the necessities of the times to do hard manual work, then we shall have a rebirth of spiritual ideals, then we may return to something that approaches more nearly our old Puritanism."

Mary Pickford And Douglas Fairbanks

(New York Times)

Gladys Mary Smith Fairbanks affirms that marriage is an art. Thereby she lets herself in for an argument with Fannie Hurst, who seems to think that the institution was invented to provide occasional relief from eye strain and writer's cramp. The Hurst plan may do well enough in effete New York, but out in California, where hearts beat true amid the great open spaces, they are strong for home life.

In fact, they have to be strong in order to stand it. Mary's mother says that Douglas is a model son-in-law, and a great protection against burglars. Yet it appears that an occasional burglary would be almost a relief. When anybody looks sad Douglas stands in the middle of the room, waves his arms, and says that he is pushing the clouds away. "Our life is simple and frank," says Mary; "just an old-fashioned sort of life." When there is sickness in the family Douglas pulls the invalid out of bed and takes her away to climb mountains for a few days, and she isn't allowed to drink water for an hour after she comes home. When rosy-fingered dawn breaks, he telephones to the florist for a bouquet of orchids, and then starts out for a stroll across the estate. He comes back on the run, doing the high hurdles over the hedges, sprinting across the pansy beds, splashing through the pool, with twenty-five Alaskan dogs at his heels; plunges into the parlor, dripping mud, water, and pansies; dashes upstairs and down again, puts his feet on the furniture, and asks if breakfast is ready, "An adorable fellow," sighs Mary; "his boyish pranks, you know, and his utter freedom from restraint."

Here in New York Fannie Hurst, having consulted her engagement book and found the evening free, mutters madly: "What is the name of that man I married? I ought to have his telephone number somewhere." Out in Hollywood, Cal., a little woman with golden hair puts the chops on the stove and wonders with a sigh if her adorable fellow will be late. The telephone rings, and he tells her he will be on hand for dinner in twenty minutes, accompanied by fourteen assorted guests, running all the way from the Duke of Sutherland and William G. McAdoo to a prize fighter and a wrestler. And there are only five chops! Married life under such conditions is more than an art; it's work.

FOREIGN HOODLUMS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir:—I was a witness to the incident described in the communication from "Out-of-Town" as having happened during the Lantern Festival Tuesday evening. The only criticism I have to offer as to "Out-of-Town's" communication is that she was not more severe in her censure of the foreign hoodlums who attacked the Chinese chauffeur, without provocation so far as anyone in that vicinity could see. But I realise that a lady could not use the sort of language that alone would be adequate for a description of the incident and I am quite sure that as THE CHINA PRESS is not printed on asbestos you would refuse to print my sentiments if fully expressed.

If the three foreigners who acted so disgracefully have a spark of manhood left in them they will come forward with an explanation, if it is possible for them to make one of even the weakest sort. But cowards who travel in "gangs" and beat up defenseless individuals cannot be expected to show even a spark of manhood.

My most sincere regret is that I was driving my own car and escorting my wife and children through a traffic jam, which effectually prevented me from taking a hand in the affair.

Sincerely,
MAN IN THE CAR AHEAD.

What A City For Money!

"What a city! There is nothing like it on earth. Babylon and Rome, in their heyday, never vied with its prodigal luxury and frantic extravagance. It is a stony nation, choked with wealth and irrigated by a Thames of waste," writes Mr. James Douglas, in the Sunday Express.

"The whole world has come to London to scatter its gains and squander its hoards. Hotels, restaurants, and theaters are glutted with the bung surplus of the cosmopolitan Crœsus. The very menials are surfeited with tips. The shops are gorged with custom. The streets are clogged with costly traffic.

"You may pretend not to be dazzled and deafened by the roaring torrent of luxury. You may try to take for granted the Niagara of pleasure. But never in our time has money been poured out so recklessly and so ruthlessly. The royal Curzon wedding was feudally grandiose, a splendid defiance of democracy—but it is only a foambell in the gale of expense. It is a poor heart that never rejoices, and it is true to say that London scarcely noticed the mediæval magniloquence of our greatest noble. She took it in her stride.

"The most amazing thing of all in the riotous spendthriftiness of our golden youth. Where do they all come from, these beardless boys of nineteen and twenty who hurl their riches about like confetti? They are the sons of our war profiteers. Their motto is the old Irish slogan: 'Come easy, go easy, God send Sunday!'

"At the steering-wheel of their gorgeous cars they sit like demi-gods, tossing their treasure into the gutter. At the restaurants they pay three pounds a bottle for the champagne they disdain to drink. They dance half the night while their cars wait in luxurious patience till the dawn stifles the yawns of their charioteers. The bejewelled raiment of their painted odalisques baffles the avarice of the tradesman and the cupidity of the merchant.

"Never was there such luxury! Never was there such waste! And yet it is easy to prove that each prodigal son is a weary patriot who unknowingly strives to deliver the body politic from the peril of inequitably distributed wealth.

"I turn to Gibbon's 'Decline and Fall,' and I unearth this passage with a sigh of ironical relief:

"'Agriculture is the foundation of manufactures, since the productions of nature are the foundations of art. Under the Roman Empire, the labor of an industrious and ingenious people was variously, but necessarily, employed in the service of the rich.

"'Such refinements, under the odious name of luxury, have been severely arraigned by the moralists of every age; and it might perhaps be more conducive to the virtue, as well as happiness of mankind, if all possessed the necessaries, and none the superfluities of life.

"'But in the present imperfect condition of society, luxury, though it may proceed from vice or folly, seems to be the only means that can correct the unequal distribution of property.'

"As in Rome, so in London! The young war-wastrel is a public benefactor. Haggardly and heroically he is mitigating the purse-pride of his progenitor.

"Cynics may wrangle over the riddle of riches. They may contend that the pleasure of amassing a great fortune is not greater than the pleasure of melting it in all the furnaces of luxury. They may declare that the joy of saving is less than the joy of spending. But the spendthrift is the antidote to the millionaire, and waste is the safeguard against swollen wealth.

"If all rich men were misers, civilisation would perish in wild insurrection. The Prodigal Son is the savior of society! Long live the Prodigal Son!"

Mystic Messages From Growing Trees And Plants

BY GEORGE T. BYE

(New York World)

For more than two hours the learned fellows of the Royal Society of Medicine listened with rigid intentness to their new associate, Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose, founder-direct of the Bose Research Institute, Calcutta, celebrated throughout the world for his studies of plant and animal minutiae.

Like the llama and chela in Kipling's "Kim," he and his Indian boy disciple faced the pundits of the West, but they talked the Western language, and their mysticism was the legend of phenomena of nature as observed and measured by science "knowing neither East nor West." Yet when he began talking of a holy tree that salaamed, of the excitability of vegetables, of leaves that exhibited a certain spasm of agony when their stems were pinched, of the similarity of the life throbs of plants and animals, he did bring much of the atmosphere of the Orient into his lecture.

"The activities which underlie life," said Sir Jagadis, "are imperceptible, but we have been successful in devising various instruments of extreme sensibility which record the twitching throb of a plant under a shock, the time taken to perceive it, and the rate of impulse at which the message is sent along the conducting path of the plant. Automatic records are also made of the living pulsation and the stupor that comes after the action of narcotics; and a definite signal is obtained at the exact moment of plant death under various poisons. The investigations have demonstrated the unity of life-reactions in plant and animal.

"The similarity is so real that after discovering certain phenomena in plants, I have been able to predict their occurrence, hitherto unsuspected, in the animal; and the predictions have invariably come true. The unexpected revelations in the life of plants have thus opened out new fields of inquiry in physiology, agriculture, medicine, and even in psychology.

"In physiology the new inquiry is concerned with the determination of the characteristics of life, its reactions to various stimuli and the unraveling of the mystery of automatism. In medicine it deals with the fundamental reaction of drugs on protoplasm itself; it tries to solve the anomaly of an identical drug inducing two opposite effects on different individuals.

"In agriculture I have been so fortunate as to discover, when experimenting with the application of graduated doses of a weed-killing poison to different plants, that a mild dose stimulated a plant until its growth was fabulous. More than that, destructive insects attacked the other plants in the experiment—they were all of the same species—but would have nothing to do with the mildly dosed one that enjoyed such a thriving life.

"In pyschology a new chapter has been opened by the discovery of nervous impulse in plants.

"My earliest apparatus (Sir Jagadis first made his impression on the great scientists of the world in 1900) was an automatic means both of administering shocks to plants and enabling them to describe their emotions by making dots on a slate."

He then told of the steps in research that had led to the discovery that plant tissue and animal tissue have similar throbs. Graphic charts were thrown on a stereopticon screen illustrating the similarity of effect of various influences on a frog's heart and a bit of leaf, the results having been written in dots both by the frog's heart and the leaf fragment by the aid of the apparatus.

"While I was busily engaged at my institute, a story came to me out of Bengal of a miraculous event. There was a full grown palm tree, as thick as my body, that was bent over as if prostrate in prayer, but which was aroused each day when the temple bells rang and would bow down lower and then raise itself. The story spread and people came to the holy tree to be cured. Miraculous cures were effected, really effected. A great thing is faith! A woman can tell by looking at her doctor if he will cure her. She has faith in a personality that appeals to her. A doctor that impresses her might dose her with aqua pura and bread crumbs, and she would grow better; while she would languish under the care of a much more learned but less attractive doctor.

"I had a great deal of difficulty before I was permitted to attach special apparatus to the tree and learn from it its mystery. I had to give repeated assurance that I would not defile the virtue of the holy tree. I had to prove that my instruments were made in India and had no unholy foreign taint. And my assistant had to become a priest and bathe in a holy stream before we were permitted to proceed.

"We found that this holy tree was affected periodically by warmth. Having been bent in a bowed position, it had the instinct to try to raise itself to a proper position, and it made the attempt daily at certain hours when its heat stimulation was greatest. This went on for years and years, finally ending when the tree died. The priests then declared that the tree had died of grief because of my persistent profanation of it.

"I was aroused with interest in trees then, and I found that they mimic human beings. They like to stay up to early hours of the morning, and they sleep about dawn. The palm tree has about an hour's sleep, from six to seven in the morning.

"About this time when I was making vegetable life confess to me, a little plant reacted curiously one day when under the stimulus of my apparatus. The phenomenon being repeated, I was able to discover that the little plant was trying to tell me that it knew that out-of-doors clouds were passing across the face of the sun.

"The effect of alcohol on plants is the same as on animals. At first there is maudlin depression, then wild exaltation. Carbonic acid, despite theories to the contrary, affects plants exactly as it affects human life. Plants require as much oxygen as animals. Chloroform and ether stupefy and kill plants.

"We come to the interesting subject of plant growth. We had had no means of detecting or magnifying this growth to make it perceptible. The speed of the snail is the slowest we can understand. The speed of plant growth is 6,000 times slower.

"The flight of hours and seasons all affect growth. The problem was to make growth immediately perceptible, which I have done with this very delicate apparatus before you, the crescograph, which magnifies movement ten million times. The fastest thing we know in life is the 15-inch shell which leaves the muzzle of the gun at the rate of 8,500,000 feet per second. My apparatus would make the stroll of a snail have the speed of 200,000,000 feet per second."

Sir Jagadis then demonstrated the machine, first explaining that a lecture hall was really not a proper place for so sensitive an instrument, where even a whisper would affect it. The apparatus is about three feet long and looks something like a goldsmith's balance. A frond was torn from a fern and placed in the machine. The lights were turned out. Presently a patch of light, projected on the crescograph by a lantern, was reflected on the wall back of the lecturer and made an orderly progression. That was the rate of growth multiplied ten million times. The frond was sprayed with seltzer water. Its growth became more rapid. It was given a sharp electrical shock. The path of light moved quickly backward, showing that the frond had contracted.

"A German has said there is no nervous reaction in plants," said Sir Jagadis. "I have discovered a reaction in a plant from a spark of electricity one fifty-thousandth of a second in duration induced in the same room with the plant. I have discovered that plants are shocked even by ether waves. We human beings have organs of sense antennae, that pick up messages, many that we do not notice. Research has made it possible so to alter molecular alignment in plants that they are not stimulated by certain disturbances. Out of this research we many make it possible for man to catch many indistinct messages that have hitherto passed by him unperceived; or permit him to withdraw within himself so that in his inner realm the jarring notes and the din of the world should not longer affect him."

TAN YAN-KAI SETS HIS VIEWS BEFORE CONSULS

Reveals Wrongs Done To People Of Hunan By Chang Ching-yao

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, July 9.—The American Consulate General at Hankow received a telegram yesterday from General Tan Yan-kai, commander of the Southern forces in the recent coup in Hunan, in which General Tan sets forth the purposes and aims of his attack in Hunan.

He revealed the wrongs General Chang Ching-yao, ex-Tuchun of Hunan, has done to the province of Hunan with the backing of the Anfuites at Peking, adding that they were driving General Chang out of Hunan, not in any spirit of militarism, but as legitimate defense.

The following is a translation of the text of the telegram in French despatched by General Tan Yan-kai:

"Changsha, Hunan, July 3, 10 p.m.

"The Legations and the Corsulates, Hankow.

THE MESSAGE

"Gentlemen: We have the honor to inform you of the terrible situation of the province of Hunan, which Chang Ching-yao, ex-Tuchun of Hunan, has caused us to endure, and to declare to you the reason and the necessity for driving him out of here.

"For three years now Chang Ching-yao has been in Hunan. He has governed the people of Hunan with cruelty, ferocity and utter selfishness. He has absorbed, or rather pillaged, the wealth and the fortunes of the province and even those of the people, for himself.

"He has left his soldiers without discipline, to menace and trouble the whole province. Further, the industries and public works of Hunan were formerly more advanced and better developed than those of other provinces, but they are at present completely destroyed by Chang Ching-yao.

KNOWN WIDELY

"These facts and scandals are known to every one. The foreigners know them as well as the Chinese. The Government at Peking has received the petitions of the people, and information from the military government of the South directed against Chang Ching-yao, but the Anfu Club has always protected him. In consequence the suffering of the Hunanese has grown daily worse.

"We, the military party of Hunan, have always respected peace; but at the same time we have pitied those unhappy Hunanese. It was thus that we were irresistibly driven to save them and that we made the decision to drive out our enemy; and thus we declare to all the Republics that God be praised, Chang Ching-yao is vanquished and his troops completely defeated.

PILLAGE EVERYWHERE

"Do you know what they have done to the places through which they have passed? At Anhua, Ning-hsiang, Yi-yang, Siang-hsiang, Chuchow, Lien-yang and Yochow they pillaged and massacred and burned everywhere. They burned churches and killed the priests.

"What would have become of us if they had remained here?

"Thus it was purely in legitimate defense that we drove them out of here, and with absolutely no spirit of militarism.

"We must also tell you that, since the law of the Provisional Convention was isolated by the Government at Peking, China has fallen into troublous times.

ANFU CLUB AHEAD

"The Anfu Club does as it pleases, without the slightest regard for the interests of the country, and they will continue to do so.

"If the question of the law is not radically and categorically decided now, things will certainly become more and more complicated and will perhaps never be resolved.

"In the name of humanity we hope that you will examine the question and give your favorable reply to the side that is right.

"We present to you, gentlemen, in the name of thirty million Hunanese, our highest considerations.

"The Commander-in-Chief of the Troops of Hunan.

"Tan Yan-kai."

Soldiers Bring Cholera Epidemic Into Hankow

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, July 12.—The movement of Northern soldiers from Hunan to this center has brought about another serious trouble to the community here, besides the harm they have done in looting and pillagng elsewhere.

They have brought down with them a much-dreaded and terrible cholera epidemic, which is sure to cause danger in time to come.

Eight cases were brought to the Roman Catholic Mission Hospital for Chinese in the British Concession at Hankow. Three of these infected men died and five are still lingering.

There have also been a number of cholera cases in the various camps of the troops.

In one camp, which is near the residences of the foreign staff of the Canton-Hankow Railway, on the Wuchang side, evidences of the epidemic are apparent.

The foreign staff has requestd the camp to be removed, threatening to clear out themselves if it is not done.

Marine Changes

The following changes in the merchant marine service took place during the week:

China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company—Mr. G. M. Symington appointed fourth engineer of the Kiangwah; from sick leave, Mr. P. Aksunoff, to supernumerary third engineer of the Kiangteen; second engineer of the Yushun, Mr. F. G. Frasel, to the Hsinming.

Indo-China Steam Navigation Company—From special service at Tientsin, Mr. J. Dixon, to second mate of the Suiwo; third engineer of the Loongwo, Mr. J. Cooker, to the Choysang; third engineer of the Choysang, Mr. R. Campbell, on sick leave; from reserve, Mr. S. E. McKinlay, to supernumerary second engineer of the Hangsang; second engineer of the Hangsang, Mr. F. W. Ross, on sick leave.

Notes From Hankow

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, July 7.—The Chinese authorities of the special administrative district, formerly the German Concession of Hankow, which was later transferred to the Chinese Government upon the latter's entry into the world war, ought to be congratulated on being the first municipal body in Hankow to take measures for limiting the speed of motor-cars along their part of the Bund and in the other streets of the special administrative district.

According to the notice given by K. C. H. Lee, English secretary of that Administration, motor-cars are allowed a maximum speed of 20 miles per hour on Han Kiang Road, the Bund; fifteen miles per hour on Han Chung and Han Ching Roads; and five miles on other roads.

Besides limiting the speed of motor-cars, the administration also has strictly forbidden the excessive use of horns.

This district, situated in the midst of the foreign concessions in Hankow, is being managed and directed by Chinese.

People who have a chance of a short sojourn in Hankow will see the good management of the district; the sanitation, efficient police, neat streets, etc.

In short, it is equal in every respect to the other neighboring foreign concessions.

This may be counted as a standing proof of the managerial abilities of the Chinese and their willingness to replace their miserable city life with a municipal life.
